Anti-nuclear groups seek Vallecitos closure

PLEASANTON — Three East Bay citizens' groups are demanding a public hearing for the renewal of two expired licenses needed to operate General Electric's Vallecitos Nuclear Center. They petitioned the Nuclear Regulator Commission last week advocating that the Vallecitos facility "be shut down permanently."

According to Jim Hanchett of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), G.E.'s Vallecitos plant has been operating on an "extended status" since their Special Nuclear Materials license expired four years ago.

"Theoretically they could operate forever on an extended status," Hanchett said Friday, "as long as NRC inspectors find they are adhearing to the license."

G.E.'s license for operating a test reactor at Vallecitos expired in Oct., 1976 and they applied for renewal of that license two years ago.

The coalition of East Bay Women for Peace, the Alameda Citizens Against Vallecitos, and the California Public Interest Research Group has charged that evacuation plans are inadequate for 4.4 million residents living within 40 miles of the Vallecitos center shouldan earthquake happen.

Hanchett said the NRC's Walnut Creek office received the coalition's petition last week and now it's up to the commission to appoint a licensing board who will schedule a prehearing to rule on the admissibility of the petition. He said the board will be appointed soon but the prehearing is not expected to be held until November or December.

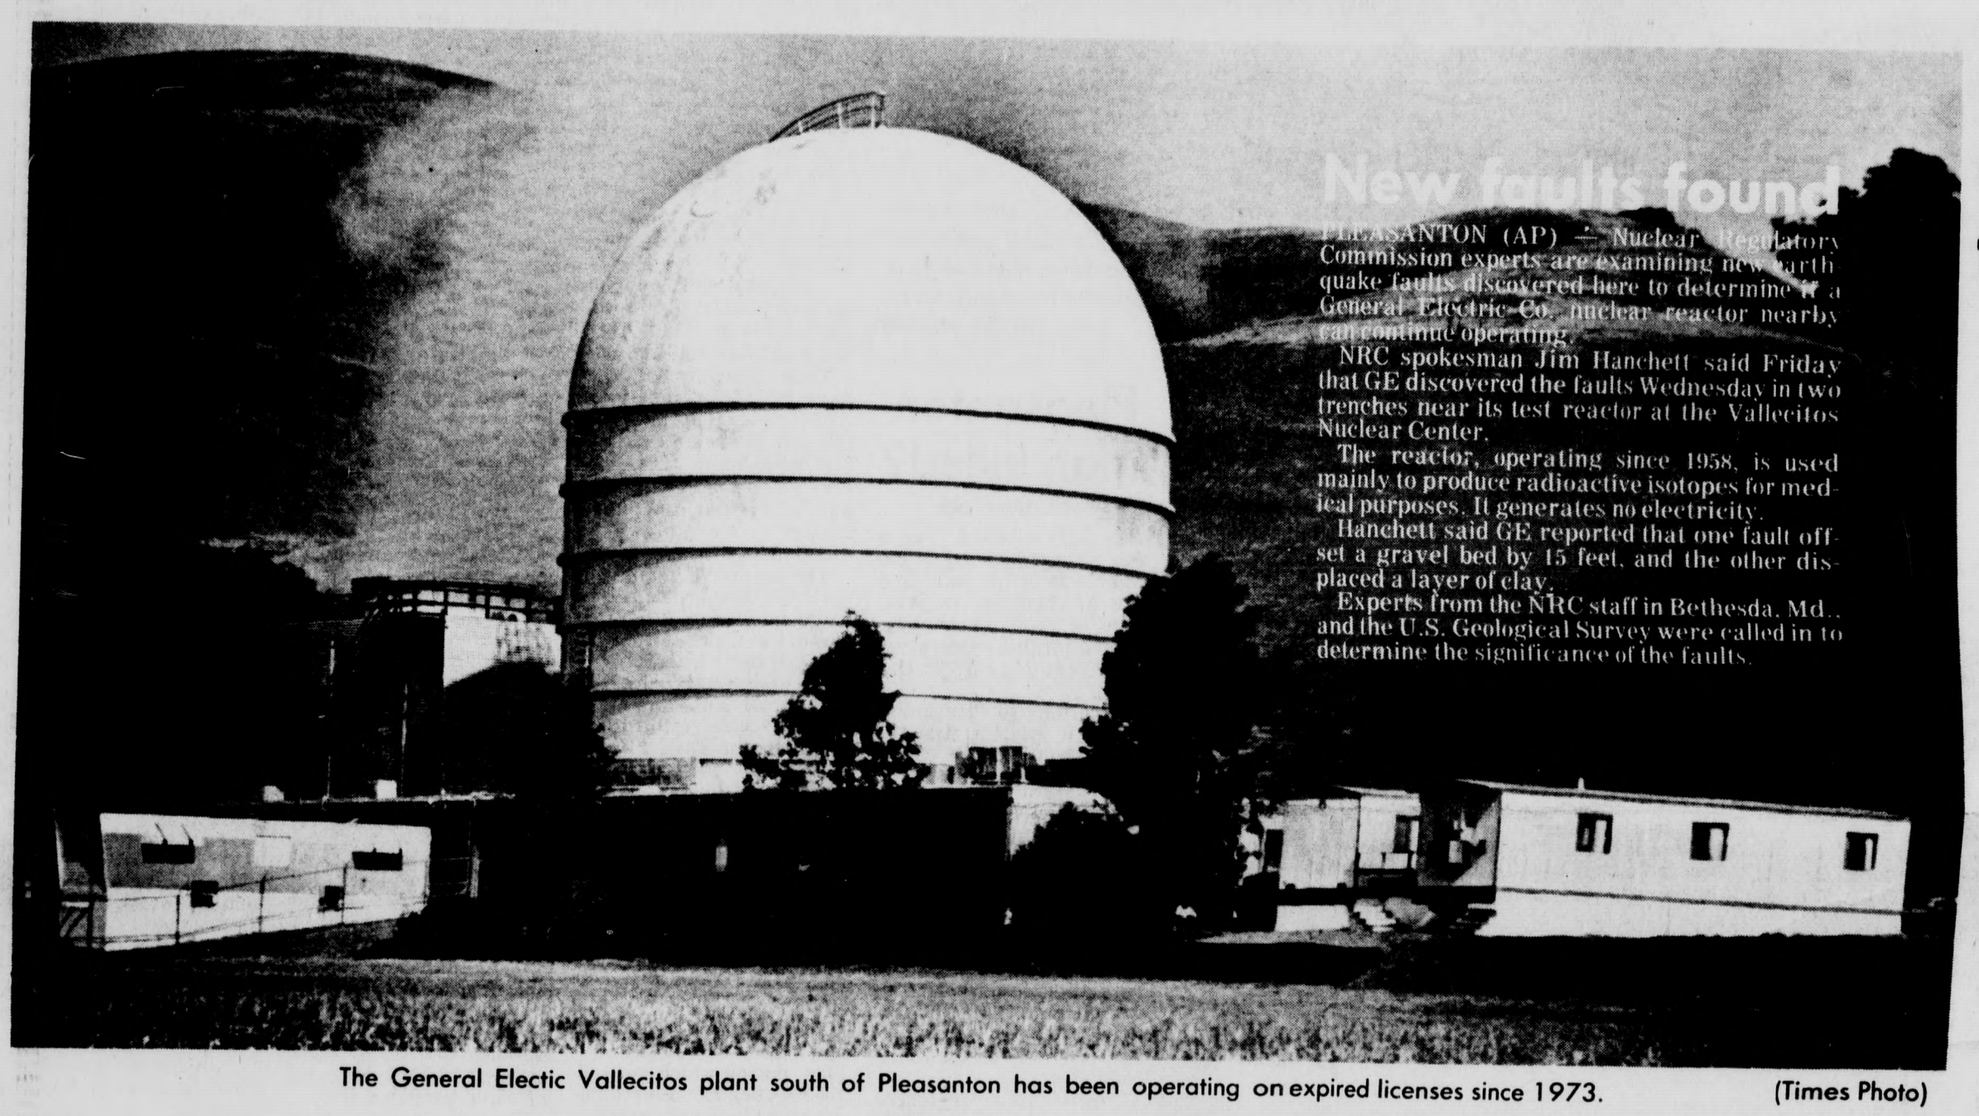

The coalition fears that an earthquake along one of the two faults near Vallecitos or an accident at the facility could cause the release of radioactive materials beyond the boundary of the site. Although the coalition claims that G.E. admits to this statement in an Environmental Information Report, a spokesman for G.E. was not able to confirm it on Friday.

The coalition emphasized that the Vallecitos Nuclear Center was constructed in the 1950's with structural engineering designs based on now-outdated seismic information. They said that recent geological studies reveal newly discovered earthquake faults near the center. One report by the U.S. Geological Survey last month shows the Las Positas Fault passing within 8,000 feet of Vallecitos and having a potential of 6.5 Richter magnitude more energy than is released by a hydrogen bomb.

The coalition said the same report shows the Verona fault passing directly beneath the radioactive waste storage facility at Vallecitos. G.E.'s Ken Clemens said, "We don't have any information that the Verona fault runs underneath our waste facility."

Currently G.E. has employed two outside geological firms to perform a study on faults near Vallecitos. "They've done some trenhing on our site which will tell if there has been any seismic activity," Clemens said. He added that "no evacuation plan is in place" because evaluation of potential accidents envisage no situation which would require evacuation for public safety."

New faults found

PLEASANTON (AP) — Nuclear Regulatory Commission experts are examining new earthquake faults discovered here to determine if a General Electric Co. nuclear reactor nearby can continue operating.

NRC spokesman Jim Hanchett said Friday that GE discovered the faults Wednesday in two trenches near its test reactor at the Vallecitos Nuclear Center.

The reactor, operating since 1958, is used mainly to produce radioactive isotopes for medical purposes. It generates no electricity.

Hanchett said GE reported that one fault offset a gravel bed by 15 feet, and the other displaced a layer of clay.

Experts from the NRC staff in Bethesda, Md., and the U.S. Geological Survey were called in to determine the significance of the faults.

New Town developer fights on

HAYWARD — Harlan Gelder mann or his representatives are expected to appear before the planning commission tomorrow to keep alive their fight for approval of New Town in the Las Positas Valley north of Livermore.

New Town was nixed by a 3-2 vote of county supervisors Sept. 30, but it returns to the planning commission at 1:30 p.m. in the public work building, 399 Elmnurst, as a matter of routine referral.

The commission can reaffirm its earlier split - vote support of the New Town plan or it can go along with the supervisors' rejection of it. In either case, the matter will bounce back to the supervisors one more time as part of the whole county review procedure.

New Town has upstaged other Valley general plan issues, but they are around, too, some of them with opponents. There is the 1,500 home development proposed for Collier Canyon Road near I - 580 which city of Livermore has vowed to fight again to the supervisors' level. Mayor Helen Tirsell is optimistic that Livermore can reverse the county's earlier approval of it.

Other major pockets of development approved by the supervisors include Carl Nipper's plan for 120 homes on the Pleasanton Ridge; Conrad Moldt, who could build up to 660 units east of the Pleasanton Meadows subdivision in Pleasanton; and the Martin - Mohr Ave. area where up to 180 units could occupy 180 acres, according to the county's zoning ordinance.

Also facing commissioners tomorrow is Edith Marshall's application for eight homes on 8.5 acres at the southeast corner of the intersection of Foothill Road and Castlewood Drive next to Pleasanton.

Castlewood's sewage treatment plant is over capacity and county staff reports that while Marshall could get approval for her development, it couldn't hook up until the sewage problem is resolved. Most estimators say that will be one to three years from now.

The cattle have left Del Valle

While the drought has seriously limited cattle grazing in the East Bay Regional Parks, particularly Del Valle Park, it has forced the district to reexamine some of its management procedures and even helped some native plants and grasses.

Those were two of the conclusions of a recent report to the district's directors which said that grazing income was about half of normal, down to $58,565 for 1977-78, and the parks "will brace for continued drought or a slow recovery at best."

The report, by resource analyst Harry G. Reeves, added that while the parklands did not appear lush, "it is a mistake to think the hills are in poor condition."

Native plants and animals are generally doing quite well and have reappeared where they were completely unnoticed because of the fast-growing European annual grasses, Reeves said.

Pastures dry but drought not fatal

Cattle grazing has been allowed in parks for years to reduce the fire danger if the activity does not interfere with public recreational use of the land. At Del Valle this year however, "there was so little grass production or water it was not practical to graze," Reeves said.

The drought even had its virtues, he admitted, saying "we have benefitted by learning more about proper management of the district's land and water resources as a result of these unusually dry years than we might have in decades of favorable weather."

"The projection for the 1977-78 will be based on the current year's experience because there is no assurance that more feed will grow next year than this. While the drought continues to paint a gloomy picture, a rainy season similar to 1974-75 would leadto a projected income in excess of $125,000, Reeves said .

He reported that while some parks showed very little grass production, a "careful examination of the soil usually shows ample seed to be present." He recommended reseeding only where erosion hazards were great and pointed out last year early rains brought early germination of the seeds which were later killed by unseasonable warm weather.

The report added the park district was also considering reintroducing Tule elk to parts of its original range within park district boundaries.

Candle-cause fire?

Fire department investigators suspect burning candles may have caused a fire that did $20,000 damage to an apartment at 5241 Norma Way at noon Friday in Livermore.

Four fire engines, and 14 men responded to the blaze, and had it under control in 10 minutes.

There were no injuries reported. The fire was confined to the bedroom of the apartment.

Granada scores big win

Granada High School's football team broke out of its slump with a resounding 40-8 victory over host California in East Bay Athletic League action yesterday. It was the Matadors' first EBAL victory of the season. In other EBAL action Friday night Dublin stunned Livermore 25-0, San Ramon edged Amador Valley 21-20 and Monte Vista toppled Foothill 17-8.

Allen opposes report

BART failing grade disputed

A Metropolitan Transportation Commission study calling BART a failure at spurring economic growth and solving transit problems was disputed this week by the Valley's BART director, Robert S. Allen.

Allen has not seen the entire report yet, but he answered its claims as reported last week in the press.

Growth, especially commercial development, was spread out in the Bay Area until BART came along, said Allen. Afterward, Fremont and Walnut Creek areas, with their BART rail lines, started to develop greatly, he said.

Even San Francisco saw its effects, said Allen. Voters passed the bond issue for BART in 1962 and once the business community had that green light, there was plenty of development. More than a dozen buildings taller than 20 stories went up in the last 15 years with the assurance that commuters would have the fixed rail system to take them to their urban jobs.

"The Valley has had a tremendous increase in the number of commuters, though not nearly as much as Walnut Creek and Fremont," said Allen.

Allen thinks that BART has absorbed its share of the travel miles covered by the big increaese in population over the years. Car traffic would be even worse without BART, he said.

Plea to hold SRV rail line

MARTINEZ Contra Costa County Supervisors will be asked to oppose the abandonment of Southern Pacific Railroad's San Ramon Branch Line Tuesday.

The Public Works Department will ask the board to refuse SP's request, saying that the line may become an important corridor for passenger service in the future.

The staff pointed out that the state is preparing a statewide rail plan which will examine the importance of the line in an overall context.

A recent survey indicated that the San Ramon Branch Line would not be feasible in the near future as a Contra Costa County commute railroad.

Bay Area in year 2001

By RUSS YARROW
Lesher News Bureau

BERKELEY — Architect Paolo Soleri envisions people living in mile-high cities by the year 2000 surrounded by wilderness, while Princeton physicist Gerald O'Neill sees some of us living in whirling space colonies halfway between the Earth and the moon.

The Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG) is also working on a plan that, while not as visionary as Soleri's and O'Neill's, does promise to affect radical changes in the lifestyles of Bay area residents.

Tagged as an environmental master plan, it is aimed at cleaning up the Bay area's air and waters to a level acceptable to the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) by the year 2000.

The nine-county Bay area is a "non-attainment" area in the eyes of the EPA -- it violates federal standards of air and water quality, as do most other major urban centers in the country.

So as to achieve those standards, ABAG, under orders from the federal government, is developing a rigorous set of regional regulations ranging from a proposed ban of lawn mowers to what ABAG calls "Oh My God" measures like mandatory gas rationing and population control.

"I can't stress too much the significance of this plan" Superivosr Robert Schorder of Walnut Creek commented at a recent meeting. "It will radically alter the lifestyle of every resident in the Bay area."

These are some of the major proposals ABAG is considering to be part of the environmental master plan:

-- Urging local governments to adopt land use controls that would encourage high-density housing growth near local industrial developments so more people can live closer to their jobs.

City eyes solar plan for offices

LIVERMORE — Construction bids for the multi-service center will be recommended for adoption at tomorrow night's city council meeting scheduled for 8 o'clock.

The agenda also calls for City Manager Bill Parness to submit a report recommending a solar energy design for the new Administration Building. The council has suggested an ammendment to the architect's contract providing for a solar heating and cooling consultant to design the services. Cost for the design and study of the solar energy system is expected to range between $7,000 and $10,000. It is hoped Federal money can be used for the actual project once city council has taken the issue through proper channels.

A public hearing has also been slated to investigate whether the City of Livermore should enforce vehicle code regulations pertaining to reckless driving, basic speed laws, handicapped parking, and speed contests that happen on private property. What authority the city police has in enforcing these regulations on private property will be the key issue of the hearing.

The Springtown Golf Course equipment bid for the snack bar is also on the agenda for Monday night. Two venders have submitted proposals that will be recommended for approval. In addition to the bids submitted by Modern Kitchen Equipment and Food Services Equipment, Inc., the council will look at a bid from the Virco Manufacturing Corporation who wants to supply tables and chairs to the Springtown facility.

'Wild, Wild West'

Year 2000 to record drastic energy stops

It's also proposed that underdeveloped areas of the region, like the North Bay counties of Sonoma, Napa and Marin, be the site of more extensive development to take the pressure off the highly developed South Bay region.

-- Mandatory gas rationing in the mid-1980s is seen as almost a necessity as an indirect means of reducing carbon monoxide pollution, with a possible ban on small power tools, like lawn mowers and chain saws.

-- Using state-of-the art control technology on industries to reduce smokestack pollution. Estimated cost would be nearly $2.4 billion over the next 20 years, but ironically it is predicted to "substantially" increase industrial energy consumption.

-- Totally banning on oil-based paints in the area, which add to the evaporation rate of organic solvents.

-- Aiming for a 50 percent reduction in private autoemissions through more stringent smog device controls and mandatory inspection programs for private car owners.

-- Increase bridge tolls to $1.25 and impose special taxes on large urban parking lots.

-- Possible development of controls on foreign immigration into the Bay area to reduce population levels.

Those recommendations have been developed by ABAG's planning staff over the past 18 months under a $750,000 grant from the federal government and are part of the environmental master plan's air quality maintenance program.

The complete plan will also set standards for sewage treatment, surface run-off and protection of Bay and Delta waters.

But now that the plan has been thrown out to ABAG's special Environmental Management Task Force, (EMTF) a 46-member body made up of local supervisors, council members and representatives of special interest groups, it's stirring up a lot of critical reaction.

The EMTF is expected to pore over the plan and form it into a final draft that will be presnted for public hearings in the month of January.

So far the EMTF has had two sessions to discuss the plan, during which most of the reaction has been to the proposed land use controls, which are expected to have the most reaching effects in the Bay area.

North Bay representatives in particular are wary of offering their region as an oasis for industrial and residential development.

One Marin County supervisor, for example, warned that shifting development from the south to the north bay was like "moving some of the bears from Yellowstone to Yosemite --it doesn't do Yellowstone much good and it does a lot of harm to Yosemite."

Another EMTF member simply said of the North Bay-South Bay development shift: "Let's bury it."

But in addition to that recommendatiopn, the environmental master plan proposes a set of 46 separate land use regulations that are expected to have severe repercussions econimcally.

Pinpointing the auto and the daily commute of Bay area workers as the primary source of pollution in the region, ABAG planners are hoping to cut back the average commute distance of 15 miles by locating residents closer to their place of employment.

That would be done by promoting high-density housing near existing urban centers and redeveloping decaying downtown areas through a comprehensive overhaul of local planning policies.

With the emphasis on high-density housing (apartments, condominiums and planned unit developments), the average single-family suburban dwelling so hard-sought today is expected to jump in price by 25 percent in the next five to 10 years.

ABAG is hoping to achieve an average housing density in the Bay area of 6.5 units per acre by 2000. The existing average density in central Contra Costa now is around three units per acre.

And that density rise is likely to hit Contra Costa significantly. The draft environmental master plan notes the biggest reservoirs for growth and population in the area are here and Santa Clara County, while Contra Costa Santa Clara, Alameda and Solano counties host four-fifths of the landin the Bay area left for industrial development.

So under the ABAG plan, the average price of land and suburban housing in outlying areas can be expected to rise sharply, maybe even prohibitively for a Contra Costan with an average income of $15,000.

The ideal of a single-family, two-car garage home in a pastoral suburban setting will be replaced by a stake in a condominium or townhouse complex near pockets of industrial or office employment.

Yet some EMTF members have predicted that under those conditions, people might be willing to locate in areas like Tracy and Manteca to own a house, compounding the commute problem that exists now.

The environmental master plan also proposes more controls for big-source polluters like refineries and other industries, many of which are located in this county.

One of the proposals is to limit sulfur dioxide emissions from industries to 300 parts per million by applying the best control technology available to existing plants.

The fear though, is that those requirements will put such a heavy financial burden on industries that it will force them to leave the area while preventing new ones from moving in.

Since the Bay area is the first area in the country to develop its own air quality plan, ABAG is concerned that it might become a martyr in the race for pristine skies.

ABAG President Lenard Grote has appealed to the federal government not to let that heppen. "We ... cannot propose and support measures for our area which puts us at a competitive disadvantage with other parts of the country when it comes to the creation of new industry and jobs," he wrote in a letter to President Jimmy Carter.

"We are therefore seeking your support which will assure consistency among the various parts of the country in the achievement and maintenance of air quality standards and not penalize our area for being among the first in the nation to develop a workable program."

While all of the proposals of the plan are expected to generate heated controversyduring the public hearing stage early next year, ABAG is hoping that it won't be so overwheliming as to hold up the plan beyond its October 1978 deadline.

It's then that the plan is scheduled to be approved by an ABAG general assembly and go to the EPA for consideration.

If the EPA decides the plan won't meet its standards. it will be scrapped and one will automatically be imposed by the state Air Resources Board.

One EPA representative also warned that a temporary ban on new industrial development might be imposed if the ABAG plan isn't approved.

If the plan is approved, ABAG is allowing two years for local governments to amend their zoning laws and general plans to comply with its land use control measures.

Other regulations, such as tighter emission controls on cars and gas rationing, would have to be legislated at the state level.

ABAG is banking on its financial muscle to enforce the master plan at the local level. The regional agency, though it doesn't carry legislative powers, does retain veto power for federal grant monies and any local governments applying for federal grants must apply through ABAG.

ABAG has warned that if a city hasn't complied with the plan, it will automatically veto any grant requests.

That could result in no money for local water and sewage treatment facilities, which could lead to a de-facto ban on new residential hook-ups.

The next task force meeting on the environmental master plan is scheduled for Nov. 9 at the Hotel Claremont in Berkeley.

Police probe 'cracks' Pleasanton guns theft

PLEASANTON — Police reported Friday they had cracked, but not solved completely, the theft of 13 handguns and a rifle from a residence here Tuesday afternoon.

They also did not connect the burglary with the reported theft of two rifles and shotgun from another local home earlier last week.

Police were led to two Pleasanton youths aged 15 and 16 by a tip Friday morning, according to Lt. Dave Freeman. He said the two suspects had been "very coperative" in helping police recover six of the missing weapons, some ammunition and other objects reported missing.

The two were not formally charged Friday but, according to Freeman, a third suspect was still being sought along with the other weapons. The two were released into their parents custody pending further investigation.

Sheriff's investigators were still working on another weapons theft Friday. Marion York, 657 Happy Valley Rd., told deputies her house was burglarized twice last week, first Monday morning then Tuesday night. Two rifles and shotgun were reported missing Tuesday. The day before she had noticed a chain saw and other power tools gone.

was fully clothed. There was a severe wound on the right side of his head and the apartment showed signs of a violent struggle, broken furniture and blood splattered around the room.

According to Pleasanton police, it was the first reported homicide in many years for this city.

After being notified by the apartment complex manager, Elisa Madonia, police responded at 1 p.m. The manager had used a master key to enter the apartment after being advised the stereo set had been playing continuously for the past few days and no one had seen Gutierrez during that time. She discovered the body on the living room floor.

Police said Gutierrez was also known as 'Fat Freddy' when he was a member of the Oakland Chapter of the Hells Angels motorcycle group a few years ago. He was no longer active in the organization.

Residents of the apartment also reported hearing loud voices involved in an argument coming from Gutierrez' apartment several nights earlier.

Exact cause of death has not been determined pending examination of the body by Alameda County Coroner's office. Police are continuing their investigation for further details.

Pleasanton civic center to expand

PLEASANTON — City staff is recommending the council approve a specific plan and architectural firm for the proposed civic center expansion at the council's Tuesday evening session.

The recommended plan would extend the current building in the front, facing Bernal Avenue, and in the back a total of 836 square feet. That additional space would allow the city to move council chambers and city attorney's offices from leased space on West Angela Street over to the Civic Center.

Pleasanton architect Jack Bras has entered a bid of $246,840, including both construction costs and architect fees. Staff recommends the8 city hire Bras, although his estimate is slightly over the $240,000 figure budgeted for Civic Center expansion.

E. County center favored in Pleasanton council poll

PLEASANTON — At least three city council members want the proposed East County Government Center built in Pleasanton — even if a 70-bed jail is included in the center, according to a Times telephone survey.

Mayor Bob Philcox wants the center in town, but doesn't know if he would support a pre-trial detention facility. And council member Frank Brandes could not be reached for comment.

The council is being asked by the board of supervisors to choose one of four possible sites for the center on Hopyard Road and to indicate whether the city would also accept the jail. The board has asked the council to make a commitment at the meeting this Tuesday.

The council seems to be leaning towards the site on Hopyard at planned Stoneridge Road extension, owned by Willow West Corporation. That site is northeast of the Val Vista residential area.

Council member Joyce LeClaire says that location would be "quite a safe area" for a pre-trial jail because it is relatively removed from homes.

But Val Vista resident Don Savery isn't sure about that. When the Times informed him of the impending council action he reserved comment until he talked the matter over with other residents. He did say, however, that a neighborhood representative certainly will attend the meeting Tuesday.

The council will merely be making Pleasanton's bid for the center if members choose a site and approve the jail possibility. County supervisors are considering three other areas in Livermore, Dublin and Santa Rita. The Santa Rita site already holds the county jail.

County Administrator Loren Enoch is recommending the board choose the that county owned site.

Where8ver the courts and administrative buildings are constructed, they will undoubtedly attract other business such as restuarants, attorneys and other offices to the area, thus Pleasanton officials think the center would be a great business benefit to the city.

Work crew cuts Dublin phone cable

Approximately 400 homes and businesses in the Dublin and Santa Rita area were cut off from telephone service Friday when a trencher operated by Continental Electric of Richmond severed a Pacific telephone cable.

The Santa Rita jail was among customers without phones for 10 hours. The trencher severed the cable at 10:30 a.m. and it took repairmen until 9 p.m. to laboriously re-connect each of the 400 lines back to the correct ends. Pacific Telephone may try to recover costs from the electrical company, depending on the circumstances under which the cable was severed, according to spokesman Bob Deward.

Only phones with 828 and 829 prefixes were affected by the accident. Continental Electric of Richmond was laying electrical liness on the south-east corner of Dougherty Road and Dublin Boulevard when the cable was severed.

All phone service was restored by 9:30 p.m. on Friday.

Admission is $1.50 per person and the first 500 to go through will be given a coupon for a free hamburger from MacDonalds.

Five rooms have been readied and a laboratory scene concocted by Amador High School sound crew is especially chilling, said Hunt.

For young children who'd rather not be spooked, a pumpkin patch is open to them.

The spook house is located in the poultry building at the fairgounds and reached by entering at the main enterance on Pleasanton Avenue.

The haunted house will be open through Monday, Oct. 31 from 7 to 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and Friday and Saturday from 7 to 11 p.m.

Proceeds will go to the March of Dimes research of birth defects for more information, call 836-2267.

Garnett-Austin Center

Facility offers disabled hope

LIVERMORE— Garnett-Austin Center here has become synonomous for helping people help themselves.

Working with adults referred by the Department of Health, Department of Rehabilitation or through private referrals, director Richard Howell and his staff have reestablished humanism and self respect to a segment of the population that often in the past has been ignored or put in the nearest, most convenient pigeon-hole.

Though the men and women referred to the center on Research Drive are anywhere from 18 to the middle years, average age of the present 24 employes is about 30. All are developmentally handicapped, which is to say they have either mental, educational or physical disabilities.

yet, these are people who can function and achieve as anyone else if given a chance.

Howell, who also serves on the board of the Valley Volunteer Bureau, says the center has been in existence at the present site four years, starting with nine employes and two supervisors. Presently there are 25 coming to the center and six fulltime staff members.

Part of a county-wide association of six workshops for the developmentally disbled, Garnett - Austin's funding base is from revenuesharing, United Way, and fees for services the center provides.

One of the center's biggest clients is Lawrence Livermore Laboratory.

But Howell notes the frustrations encountered when he says, "We've just begun to identify a broader need in the Valley and we're stuck for financial and facility resources."

Howell says Garnett-Austin has outgrown the present 2,600 sq. ft. facility. "We could use another 6,000 sq. ft. to adequately house our work area, lunch room and offices."

Projected growth is to serve between 50 and 75 Valley residents.

Through the diversified projects worked-on at the center, the men and women employed there can develop a sense of worth, reestablish self-respect in some instances and move away from a position of dependence.

The jobs vary from packaging of pamphlets and brochures to electronic cable assembly. Howell interjects that the center is becoming more machine-oriented.

The program at Garnett-Austin serves two aspects: Social— learning survival skills and community awareness— and economic — "We are like a small industry or job shop," comments Howell.

Everyone coming to the center "earns a pay check," says Howell. "We don't subsidize industry. We are competitive."

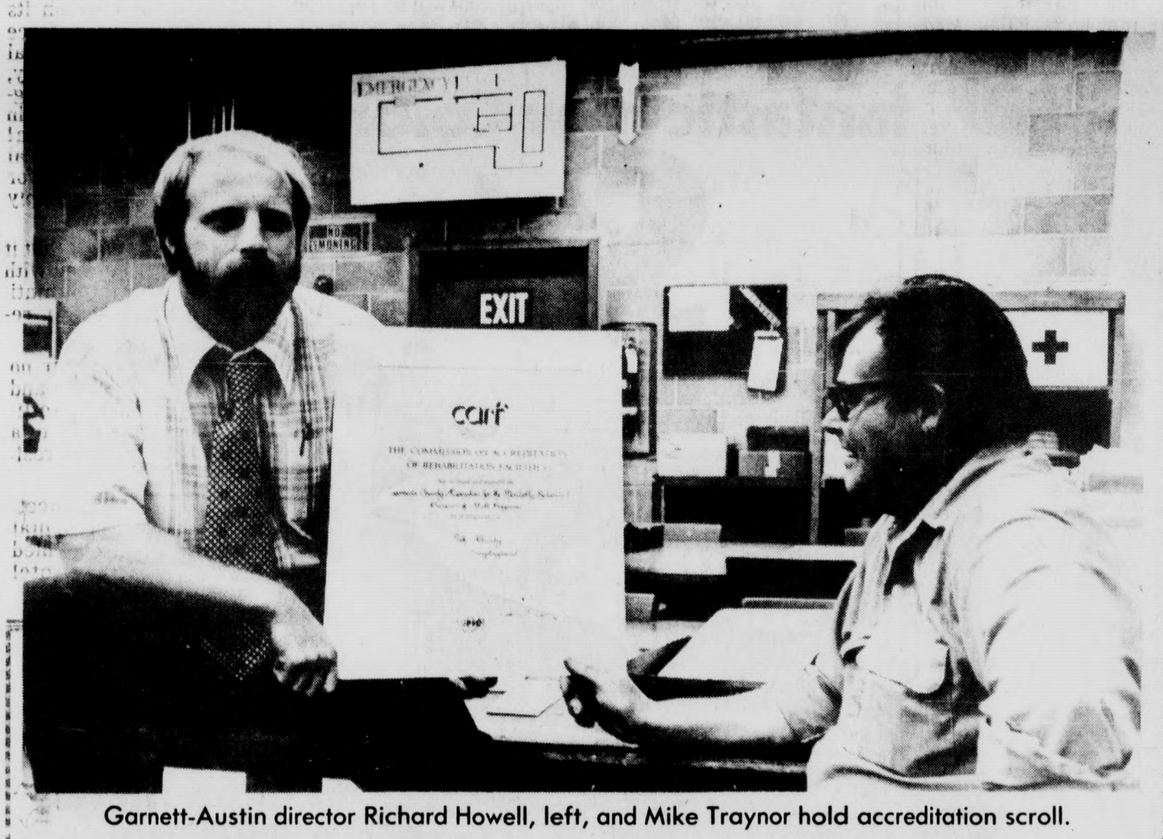

Asked what the typical duration of stay is, Howell says it is "long term sheltered employment. For some people, this is their place of employment, period, for others it is a time of transition.

There is an effort made to look for employment beyond the person's employment at G-A. "We have placed people at the lab and at Physics International in San Leandro."

Howell points with pride to recent accreditation of the workshop for a three-year period. On the handsome scroll are the words "The Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities has surveyed and accredited the Alameda County Association for Mentally Retarded Division of Adult Programs for its program of work activity sheltered employment."

The center is also guided by an active board chaired by Edith Gaskill and also including Jack Noona, a local attorney, Sue Inami, Marie Timmer, Howard Schlereth of Nuclepore, and Grare Davis.

Dublin cityhood block to ask alternatives in feasibility study

DUBLIN — The Dublin Incorporation Committee is planning to include information on alternatives to cityhood in their feasibility study.

During an incorporation committee session Thursday night aimed at getting citizen input, audience members suggested alternatives to cityhood be explored. Local public agency officials attending the meeting agreed.

Three alternatives were suggested. They were to create another and/or expand the existing special district (Valley Community Services District (VCSD), annex to the City of Pleasanton or set up a special county service area.

Roland Mayne, executive director of the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) defined a county service area. He said it is a taxing unit, not a government agency, where the board of supervisors extend a service to an area. Then that area pays for the service with a special tax.

Tom Schweser, LAFCO chairman, assured the audience that Dublin could not be annexed to Pleasanton without Dublin voter consent.

Some concern was shown by officials and citizens over the feasibility study proposed to be done by Beverly Lane for $750.

Lane is a veteran of the Danville/San Ramon/Alamo incorporation effort last year. She is also working on a masters thesis dealing with what it takes to incorporate a community.

"I have some concerns about this study," said Mayne. "The City of San Lorenzo paid $12,000 for a similar study."

He added he would have to know more about what Lane planned to put in the study before reaching a final decision on its worthiness.

Dave Burton, incorporation committee chairman, said those attending did finally agree to let Lane go ahead with the study. The next step will be to apply to the board of supervisors for the $750 fee.

The $750 dollars will come out of a $1000 fund supervisors budgeted for the incorporation movement. The money was originally slated to be channeled through the Dublin Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber has declined to give official support to the effort for cityhood pending completion of an opinion poll among their 245 members. Chamber officials said they would have to get approval from chamber members before they would lend support to the movement.

The $1000 cannot be handled directly by the Dublin Incorporation Committee. Funds have to be channeled through a public agency, Burton explained.

The Valley Community Services District (VCSD) directors informed the Alameda county board of supervisors that VCSD was willing to be the funding conduit, according to VCSD General Manager Paul Ryan.

Burton said meeting attendants agreed to a motion to hold a public forum the latter part of November or December. The object of the forum would be to inform the public what the options are pertaining to incorporation. Citizen input is also wanted.

Although Dublin is noted for generating surplus retail sales tax, some audience members challenged incorporation committee budget figures. They said they were not convinced the proposed budget, which allowed roughly $1 million dollars for operating expenses, was economically sound enough to fund a city.

Burton pointed out two major businesses had approached the Dublin chamber in hopes of moving to Dublin behind Mervyns. Montgomery Ward and Gemco were the businesses, Burton said. He added those two, plus others planned for the accompanying mall, would generate even more tax for the community.

Government study concludes state water woes flow deep

By DAVID HOFFMAN
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Neither the controversial Peripheral Canal nor a massive program of new water projects will satisfy California's demand for water by the year 2000' a government study has concluded.

The congressional watchdog General Accounting Office says current proposals to build at least $8 billion worth of federal and state water projects will not alleviate the predicted water shortage.

In fact, they could mean damming wild rivers, pumping underground water and damaging more than one-million acres of fertile farm land.

The GAO report says California will face serious groundwater problems and a yearly shortage of 3 million acre-feet of water by the turn of the century.

The report appears to bolster claims that California's state and federal water systems eventually will overextend the amount of available river water.

The report, released Thursday, also casts doubt on Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s claim that his proposed $3.5 billion water package — including the Peripheral Canal — will meet the state's water demands through the next century.

If more water projects are undertaken, the GAO suggeststit may be necessary to relax the state Wild and Scenic Rivers Act and build even more dams to increase the water supply. But this would "reverse current trends" that favor wild river protection.

Without additional water from the rivers, the GAO says California will have to pump ground water from the valleys. The resulting pollution and possible cave-ins could damage more than one-million acres of productive farm land, the GAO says.

The report, which also surveyed the impacts of this year's drought, was prepared for a House subcommittee chaired by Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Redwood City.

The GAO report makes no specific recommendation on the 43-mile Peripheral Canal, which would shunt Northern California river water around the Sacramento - San Joaquin River Delta and toward farms in the southern valleys.

The report notes, however, that the state has set higher Delta water quality standards than the federal Bureau of Reclamation. These differences would have to be ironed out before the canal could be undertaken as a joint project, the GAO says.

Delta water users have long opposed the canal on grounds it will divert fresh water flows needed to counter salinity.

Top BART staff pay freeze

By RUSS YARROW
Lesher News Bureau

OAKLAND — The salaries of BART management employees making over $35,000 a year have been temporarily frozen by a special wage review committee.

The committee, established by the transit district, acted about a month after an independent study criticized BART's high salaries.

The freeze affects about two dozen workers who earn an average of $41,000 annually. It will eliminates the automatic cost- of-living increases the employees have been receiving quarterly.

The next increase was scheduled for January.

The five-member Salary and Wage Review Committee, chaired by BART director John Glenn, also voted to compare the salaries of 10 "benchmark" employees — secretaries to top executives — with those of similarly employed transit workers throughout the country.

BART will hire an outside consultant to conduct the survey, which is expected to take a year to complete.

"I think this is going to be one of the most important committees we have at BART," said Glenn. "We can take the whole salary structure apart and set it back up again."

BART General Manager Frank Herringer had recommended that the committee freeze cost-of-living raises for those making $40,000 and more, but the committee lowered that figure to $35,000.

Herringer is the highest salaried BART employee, making $68,000 a year.

The critical independent study, conducted by Booz, Allen and Hamilton, Inc., will be officially presented to the board in November.

Glenn said salaries account for about 70 percent of BART's budget.

Pleasanton pools may be shut down

The Pleasanton Swim Club may be forced to leave town if the city council follows staff recommendation and closes the three city pools during the winter months — November through February.

Staff cites the high cost of heating the Aquatic Center, the small number of Swim Club members (92), energy conservation and the fact that recreation programs are supposed to be self-supporting, as the reasons council members should approve closing the pools.

Swim Club president Jim Davis has asked council members to reduce or drop altogether the $280 per week fee the club must pay to use the pools this winter.

The club has been negotiating for use of the olympic-size California High School pool in San Ramon because of the high costs at the Aquatic Center. That cost went up $80 a week (from $200 a weeklast winter) to offset high energy costs.

Davis notified the council in a letter that club members want to keep practising in Pleasanton, but can't bear the high costs. Staff reports the city also can't bear the high cost, thus recommends the pools be closed over winter.

In his letter, Davis wrote that he fears club members will drop out if the swim club moves to California High School.

A survey completed by the city points out that many communities do allow swim clubs free winter use of pools, but city staff is recommending against that idea.

Tami Heath

Car crash victim in coma, needs aid

Tami Heath, a Pleasanton resident for 10 years, lies in a coma in a Salt Lake City hospital. She has undergone brain surgery twice, had a tracheotomy — and her insurance coverage ran out just one week after her Sept. 28 car accident.

Only last year the 18-year-old woman had graduated from Dublin High School and was running for Maid of Pleasanton.

Her family moved to Utah recently following her mother's death from cancer, but Tami returned in September so her fiance could meet her friends. It was while returning to Utah from Pleasanton that her car went out of control and rolled four times.

An artery in her head was severed and doctors say it will be some time before the swelling goes down. But they have hope she'll regain full consciousness when that happens.

Her fiance was not seriously injured. He and her family are now trying to figure out how they'll pay the hospital bills. A fund in Tami Heath's behalf has been set up at the Valley Bank at Bernal Avenue and Main Street.

Law enforcement tightens

Attacks on elderly spurs action

Commencing Jan. 1, 1978, persons convicted of causing great bodily harm to senior citizens and the handicapped can expect a stretch in prison.

The law will take effect with a second that will establish career criminal units in county district attorney's offices.

According to Sen. George Deukmejian, speaking before the annual fall meeting of Citizens for Law and Order Friday in San Leandro, this law will permit district attorneys to go after the most serious charge against the suspect ... and not foster plea-bargaining away of any case against the subject.

Deukmejian, a strong law and order legislator with eyes cast toward the state Attorney General's job, recounted to an audience of 200 mostly-seniors new legislation aimed at lessening the supposed arbitrary and criminal-favoring actions of some judges.

"Beginning with the decisions of the Warren Court we have observed an overiding concern for the rights of the accused," alleged Deukmejian.

The 15-year capital veteran said it has been estimated there may be over two million reported and unreported crimes each year in California, not counting traffic violations. "And this is believed to be a conservative figure," added Deukmejian.

"A lot of us may not realize it, because it seems so minor, but we are making decisions every day out of fear. We put dead bolts on doors, locks on windows, don't venture out after dark or use public transit ... all because of a concern of what might happen."

"Our freedom of movement is gradually being eroded, and the basis for this is a court system that allows repetitive criminals back on the streets after brief periods of incarceration, or just probation," said Deukmejian.

Deukmejian claims there are two reasons for the increase in crime.

"First, not enough funds are put into the 'front end' of the system. We have to put more of our public and private resources into working with youthful offenders ... before they become a ward of the court and get into the system with hardened criminals.

"The second reason is that crime pays.

"One out of every five perpetrators of a criminal act is arrested, the others go free," alleged the Long Beach legislator.

"Snail's pace justice hampers the system," Deukmejian charged.

"In California, only 13 per cent convicted of felonies are ever sentenced to prison. The rest receive various forms of probation ... this is misdemeanor-type punishment," he opined.

Deukmejian was introduced by Earl Huntting, president of Citizens for Law and Order, which has chapters throughout the state. Main offices are in Oakland.

Retail prices rise

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Retail prices for goods and services rose 1.8 per cent over the June to September period in the San Francisco-Oakland metropolitan area, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said Friday.

The increase brought the area's all-items index to a new high of 184, or 8.3 per cent above the level of September last year. It meant that it cost $18.40 to pay for the same goods and services which $10 bought.

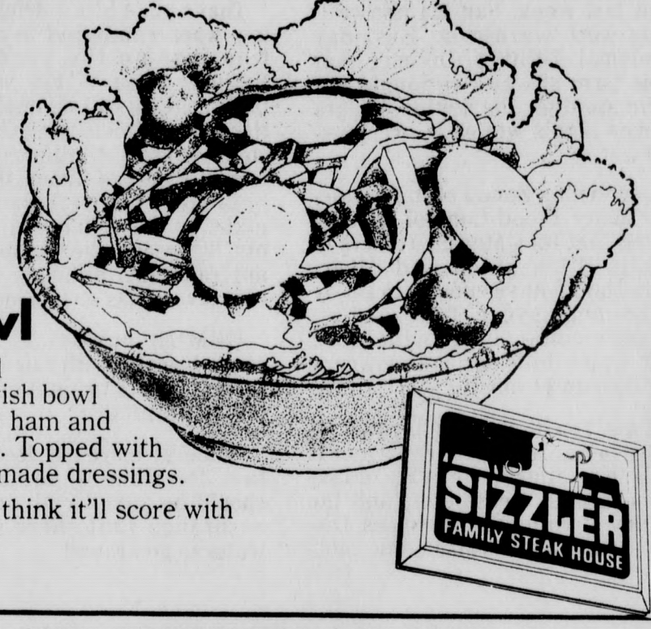

Housing went up 3.1 per cent over the quarter, accounting for more than 60 per cent of the overall rise. Home ownership went up 2.6 per cent, reflected in higher costs associated with the purchase and financing of a home.

Fuel and utilities soared 10.8 per cent, mainly because of higher residential water and sewerage charges, and gas and electric rates also were up. Household furnishings and operation increased 1.6 per cent.

Medical care costs rose 3.3 per cent to help push the health and recreation category up 2.5 per cent. Doctors' fees, health insurance

The price of having water

Contrasting news on the water front last week. San Ramon residents were warned by East Bay Municipal Utilities District that some form of water rationing will be imposed for the next two years — even if this winter is exceptonally wet.

Meanwhile, Zone 7 of the Alameda County Flood Control District hinted that its water customers in Dublin, Pleasanton and Livermore should have enough to get by in the coming year. That semi-assurance came along with word that water bills for homeowners could go up $4 soon.

Zone 7 will begin charging $8 more per acre foot for the water it sells to retailers. The cities of Livermore and Pleasanton, and the Valley Community Services District, may in turn raise home rates by $4.

That's not a bitter drink to swallow when compared to the situation just up the road in San Ramon. Even if the state cuts back Zone 7's water supply by two-thirds (and it has threatened to do so if drought continues), Valley water reserves from this year, plus plentiful well water could make up the difference. Put simply, it means there shouldn't be any rationing, although voluntary conservation is a wise idea.

EBMUD customers have already been hit with rate hikes, and there's no end in sight to water allocation limits.

If the $4 increase does become fact for Zone 7 customers, it should be payed with comforting assurance that there's enough water to go around.

A stand in Dublin

It was good to learn this week that the Dublin Chamber of Commerce will take sides on the incorporation issue. A spokesman revealed that a chambr poll is underway, and that early returns favor cityhood for Dublin by a three-to-oe majority.

How that survey turns out is not as important as the fact that the business organization is finally speaking up on a critical issue.

Since certain civic types begain pushing for an incorporation election, the Chamber of Commerce has remained silent. Time after time it has declared itself neutral on the cityhood issue. The problem is that one of the Chamber's top leaders, is also a prime incorporation backer. It has been difficult, also impossible, to seperate the Chamber from incorporation because of that dual affiliation. Now the Chamber is about to come out with its position, and rightfully so. It is one of the most influential forces in Dublin, and of course its membership will be effected by the outcome of the incorporation drive.

An official position on incorporation will clear up whatever confusion has arisen.

It's difficult to say whether Dublin will ever become a city. Incorporation is a delicate proposal to sell to voters. True or no, cityhood carries with it the stigma of higher costs for public services, and in turn, higher taxes.

Likewise, it's not certain how much influence a Chamber of Commerce endorsement would have on the voting.

Regardless, its good to see powerful civic groups taking a stand.

Quakes and the Valley

Soccer fans here should take encouragement at the formal sale last week of the San Jose Earthquakes to auto dealer Bob Himsl of Pleasanton.

This region has long prided itself as being the heart of soccer in California, and in fact, the rise of the Earthquakes may be in arge measure traced to the sport's appeal here. At a former youth soccer coach, and semi-pro player from Pleasanton, Johnny Moore, became one of the crowd-pleasing favorites as a Quake player. Several exhibitions involving San Jose and other pro soccer clubs were played here at Livermore's Robertson Park stadium.

There has been a good association between the Valley and former Quake owner Milan Mandaric of Saratoga. One would hope for even better report with the new owner, who lives right here in the hot bed of soccer.

We hope Himsl will repay the Valley's loyalty to soccer, and the Earthquakes, now that he has taken control. Matches should continue to be scheduled here. Players should be sent to the schools and the clinics where soccer is played. Special considerations should be given to youngsters from the region who attend Earthquake games.

The Quakes and the Valley have been good for each other. New ownership should make sure it remains that way. Remember, Milan Mandaric left to open his own new franchise in Oakland, and soccer loyalty extends only so far.

Learning disability

The subject of nutrition and its relationship with a child's performance in school is one that has taken on increasing importance as dedicated health professionals have probed into why "Johnny" and "Jane" cannot read or write, add or subtract to even minimal standards.

Claire Rosowicz, a school nurse in the Murray School District, passes along some notes from the California Medical Association that will be of interest to all parents of children with learning disorders.

Contributing factors in a child's failure to comprehend the basics include his/her maturfty level, unfamiliarity with English, chronic illness, frequent moves, and the fear of failure.

Ms. Rosowicz passes along the rather stunning note that boys are affected with learning disorders about four times more frequently than girls and, among children with both learning disorders and problems of attention, boys out number girls eight to one.

As vague a term as "learning disorders" may seem, it covers the problems of short attention span, fine motor incoordination, gross motor incoordination, and perceptual problems.

The first-mentioned, short attention span, is a common problem of the "hyperactive" child ... the one who has difficulty sitting in one place and concentrating on one thing at a time.

Nutrition can be a root cause of this hyperactivity. Consumption of the "wrong ingredients" — such as those including dairy products or food dyes — can set a child off.

The problem is compounded by the fact we live in a "junk food" culture. Additionally, many products in our stores contain addities of great potential detriment to children.

TMis hyperactivity or lack of coordination or perceptual problem can be classed singularly or all together under "Minimal Brain Dysfunction" (MBD).

In her article passed on to Murray parents, Ms. Rosowicz notes that if the child's physician recognizes the presence of emotional disturbance, brain damage, convulsive disorder, impairment of vision or hearing, the parents can do one of the following things to determine the extent of the child's learning disability.

First and foremost, the parent(s) should check with the teacher to learn the details of his/her behavior and achivement in school. Many schools have staff psychologists or counselors who can test the child and advise whether further examination is necessary.

If a distinct learning disability is found, a specific educaion program should be prescribed for the child, and the parents may be shown ways In which they can be involved.

PrescrIbIng of medication is controversial in itself. The better direction might be to plan a special diet, include vitamins in daily intake, start a program of exercises and visual training.

The key step, however, is that first one. Pinpointing the child's problem can be done through immediate consultation with school personnel.

As Ms. Rosowicz concludes, the goal is to increase each child's learning ability through the combined attention of the parent, teacher and physicians.

Naderism in sports

Ralph Nader has a good thing going with his new consumers' group for sports fans.

Sports is not just a game, but a business, too. Nader will look into such things as ticket prices and, more important, something a little beyond the business side of the game. The group is concerned about sport's artistic side, too.

Sports, after all, is closely related to at least one of the Lively Arts, the dance. This is especially true when certain prizefighters get together. Some of the pugs waltz for 10 rounds and the referee is stuck with naming a winner.

Football, though, is the sport where the choreography really shows. Few things are prettier than a well - choreographed pass play. The aesthetics of it are the chief reason why the long bomb to a wide receiver is considered the home run of football. Distances are reduced with one long graceful straight line, the forward pass. It appeals the the same compartment in our souls that geometry does.

Sport also involves the political arts. The 1977 New York Yankees are an excellent example of that. Keeping the balance of tempers among that group of prima donnas is no mean feat. Hubert Humphrey, who once said that politics is the art of compromise, would have been p... of the Yankees' ability to somehow pull together all those warring factions into a smooth winner.

Of course, there are the theatrical arts in sport, too. Who knows it better than Otis Sistrunk, the man who persists in wearing the theatrical effect of a shaved head on camera on Sunday afternoons. One announcer said he is from the University of Mars, and he certainly looks it. Now that "Star Wars" is upon us, I think I've noticed an increase in Sistrunk's popularity.

Game, business, and art, sport belongs to all of us, even when we quit playing the games ourselves. Nader's group takes that literally. It wants professional franchises to pay a little more attention to the fans' needs. And not just on ticket prices, either. Nader's group would have owners consider fans' wishes more in who they arquire, or, more important, who they trade away. And the commitment of keeping a franchise in an area might assume more importance.

That brings me to my modest proposal for making professional sports a little more interesting to the fans. One of the problems is that professional sports is not very close to the grass roots. Back in Minnesota when I was growing up, every small town had its own baseball team. The leagues were organized along geographical lines. It had a nice partisanship to it, a real "our boys against theirs" feel to it.

The same thing would help the gate even at the big leagues level. Take the National Footaball League, for example. It's organized all wrong. Oakland is in the same division with San Diego, Seattle, Kansas City and Denver. Not bad, but it could be better. Drop Kansas City and add Los Angeles and San Francisco and there would be two more California teams for a natural rivalry for the Raiders. Sure, it's not a new idea and the Raiders are doing so well at the gate they don't need any hype. But in the long run, elimination of the NFC - AFC split and a reorganization of the whole league to West, South, East and Central divisions and home and home games among the divisional members would make it the divisional championship races much more interesting. The same holds true for pro basketball and baseball, too. Maybe Nader's group can give the fans enough political clout to put on the pressure for it.

Nader's group might look into the National Basketball Association's insane scheduling, too. Instead of tiring out everyone with constant road trips, all teams should have two week home stansds, with visitors doing three or four consecutive games, like baseball. If arena scheduling interferes, they could at least make five game home stands the rule instead of the exception they are now.

Capitol Report

By David Hoffman
Times' Washington Bureau

It's more than just a traditional courtesy when Rep. George Miller sends a letter of congratulations to his constituents in Contra Costa County on the occasion of a birth or marriage.

It's also a taxpayer expense.

During the first six months of this year, Miller's district office spent $180 in government funds to purchase a monthly list of births and marriages in his congressional district, according to official House records.

Other California lawmakers have spent hundreds of dollars this year in taxpayer funds for such things as bar association dues, travel club membership, auto insurance, staff parties, flowers for constituents and photographs.

Under a new House rule, the expenses were disclosed last week for the first time in a report compiled by the Clerk of the House, Edmund J Henshaw Jr. The report details down to the last penny where congressmen have been spending their $2,000 yearly allowance from the taxpayers for "official expenses" outside Washington.

In Miller's case, the birth and marriage lists were used for sending congratulatory letters and government pamphlets on such things as child care and nutrition, according to his staff.

And, as the latest report illustrates, not all the money spent by California congressmen was strictly for office-related business.

For example, Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, an Orange County Republican, paid his $40 annual dues to the county bar association from his office account last March 24. And on the same day, Wiggins used taxpayer's money to pay for an $18 members in the Yorba Linda Country Club and $5 for the Orange Country Republican Women's Club.

Rep. B.F. Sisk, a long-time Fresno Democrat, listed only a few expenses, including $29 on June 16 for a "floral arrangement for a long-time constituent."

Rep. Del Clawson, a Downey Republican, reimbursed himself April 19 from his office account for $16 he spent for a two- year membership in the National Travel Club.

Of course, not all the funds were used in this way. The report lists hundreds of legitimate expenses for running a congressional office: printing, copying machines, office supplies, mileage and the like.

But the report also shows that many congressmen — particularly younger members in their first or second term — used the office account for publicity and other purposes that would be hard to classify as job-related.

Photographs — by the carload — were purchased by some members. Rep. Miller's bill from one photography studio came to $222.50. Rep. Leon Panetta, a first-term Democrat from Santa Cruz, spent $12 in government funds for a picture of him standing with the mayor of Seaside, Calif. Another second-term Democrat, Rep. John Krebs of Fresno, paid $75 for photographs of a press conference he held last February on drought problems.

There were other expenses, too. Around graduation time last summer, Rep. Miller paid $96.50 from his account for 4,000 "high school certificates." Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Dan Jose, paid $15 for 1,000 calling cards.

Rep. Robert Leggett, D-Vallejo, spent $33.70 at a fashionable Washington department store for engraving on a plaque for his district director's retirement. The taxpayers picked up the bill.

Some members were frugal. Rep. Harold T. "Buzz" Johnson, D-Roseville, for example, reimbursed one staff member for a $1.70 lunch — not your usual congressional meal. Johnson also used his account for a $1.79 frame for President Carter's picture in his district office.

Not everyone was that way — Rep. Leggett's chief aide, Ed Cheever, spent $90 in taxpayers money for a lunch with constituents at the Rotunda, one of Capitol Hill's more exclusive restuarants. The constituents were in town for a meeting on the drought.

And Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Los Angeles, paid $238 to the House restaurant for catering services on the day of President Carter's inaugural in Janurary.

Under a measure already approved by the House, the $2,000 office allowance is scheduled to increase to $7,000 next year. Congressmen are also given $6,500 in government funds to purchase stationary for their offices. It was only this year that they were barred from keeping the accumulated leftover stationary account for themselves when they retire.

Recently, the House has shown itself to be resistant to reform. A bill that would have streamlined House management — and eliminated some favored perks — was effectively killed on the floor last week just after the new office account reports were published.

Brown and his veto

Some fancy footwork was engaged in by Governor Jerry Brown in the closing hours of the 1977 legislative session in an effort to avoid what he feared might become a rash of veto overrides and thus indicate a dimishing of his strength.

Governors have long been exercising their veto power virtually without restraint. It had been nearly three decades since a veto was overridden when the Legislature overturned one of Ronald Reagan's. With this knowledge, Brown, since taking office, has been brazen in his rejection of bills and it wasn't until earlier this year that he suffered his first legislative "reprimand." That was when the lawmakers, egged on by an aroused public, overrode his death penalty veto.

Apparently assuming that to be an exceptional case, Brown has continued to act roughshod in the use of the veto. Obviously he had misread the mood of the solons for, in rejecting a bill authored by Senator Al Alquist designed to ease the Medi-cal and welfare cost burdens on county governments, he stirred the members.

Alquist had fought too hard for his bill to accept defeat and set out to gather the necessary 27 votes for an override. He got 31. Indications of support for his bill in the Assembly were sufficient to promise override there too. To head it off Brown quickly had the provisions of the Alquist measure amended into an Assembly bill, letting it be known that he would sign it.

In the same manner he headed off override of another Senate bill, this authored by Senator Ray Johnson. It was a relatively unimportant measure which reimbursed tiny Trinity County for costs of an educational program which had been encouraged by the state. The amount involved was only $22,150 but Brown rejected it out of hand.

Angered by this cavalier treatment of a small constituency, Johnson appealed to his colleagues and won override in the Senate. Again the provisions of the Johnson bill suddenly were to be found in an amended Assembly bill headed for the governor's signature.

The two instances, joined with the death penalty override, point to a new enthusiasm for the override. Spawned by years of feintheartedness on the part of the lawmakers to it, governor's have grown to the belief the Legislature does not dare to do it. This has led to the mistaken myth that an override is an "embarassment" to a governor, a sign of weakness on his part, as well as a total misconception of the reasons the veto power is granted the governor.

It was not given as President Benjamin Harrion so profoundly stated "upon the principal that he should approve only such as he would have voted for had he been a Member". Rather it was granted for the purposes detailed by one of the state's greztest legislatores, the late Senator George Miller, Jr., "of protecting the public from sectionalism, expenditures for which there are not sufficient funds, and inadvertent errors in legislation."

Stomping on the idea that the governor can veto willy-nilly, Miller declared "In exercising the veto power simply because he does not like the policy decided by the people's representatives, the exective in effect is declaring that he, and not the people, will make the laws of the state and the representatives of the people cannot impose policy upon the exective."

"The exective," Miller added, "is neither king nor dictator. This is a people's government and the exective branch must carry out the policies which the people's representatives have determined."

It now remains to be seen whether Brown's demonstrated concern over the new found potential for overrride will serve to make him more restrained in the use of the veto.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: A man in our neighborhood was arrested recently because of his association with a group involved in producing pornographic films featuring children. This is so abhorrent to us. My husband was so outraged, he was ready to take the law into his own hands. What kind of man would be involved in this kind of crime? What is wrong with him? What makes him that way? — R.R.

DEAR R.R.: Since I don't know the details of the case, I can't say anything about this individual. He may be interested strictly in the money and so immoral he can justify almost any action if it pays enough.

What kind of man gets pleasure or sexual excitement from the sexual exploitation of a child? Usually, he isn't fundamentally very different from the type who delights in seeing women exploited and maltreated. It is a difference in degree rather than kind.

The great majority of men attracted to this particular brand of pornography are men who feel powerless, but who have an extraordinary need for mastery and power. In fantasy, or in reality, they act out their sexual impulses through children, because they feel threatened by most adults. Children are less frightening to them. They're also aware that children are apt to view tham as strong, powerful authority figures to be admired.

Often, such people are insecure in their sexual roles. Though they usually lead heterosexual lives, in many cases they are driven by fears or homosexuality. Almost all find it difficult to communicate or relate to women as equals. They need to dominate.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Last week, my nephew was badly hurt in my brother's home. I haven't been able to say this to my brother but it was all a result of his passion for guns. His son thought the gun wasn't loaded. My mother, his wife and I have all pleaded with my brother to keep the guns locked up or to get rid of them altogether. I just can't understand why he feels so strongly about having them around. What is this love affair with guns? Why do some men have it while others don't? — S.V.

DEAR S.V.: How a man feels about guns is partly related to how he was brought up. In many sections of the U.S., having a gun is viewed as a symbol of masculinity. The gun is an extension of the man in the same way that a high-powered auto is. Guns seem to give certain insecure people a sense of security and self-esteem. They provide a kind of instant power. The weaker the man, physically and mentally, the more appealing this is.

A California psychiatrist, Dr. Donald Newman, has observed that the process of escalation of weapons from fists, to tire chains, to knives, to guns is more than a progression in the ability to hurt someone. The gun allows the weakest to join the "superman club" just as the possession of atomic weapons makes nations members of a "superpower club."

Weak, immature, sexually insecure men seem to be more concerned with power and the symbols of masculinity. Such men are desperately afraid of the feminine side of themselves. This is unfortunate, for the men are depriving themselves of an opportunity to grow and expand.

SIDE GLANCES by Gill Fox

"Now I know why they spell 'shoppe' with two P's. It means 'double the price'!"

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — Medically speaking is there such a thing as spasms? I have heard many doctors use the term for muscle strain, pressure, etc. Being confined to a wheel chair and having a spastic colon I get pain at times in the belt line or above with back trouble.

DEAR READER — You better believe there is such a thing as spasm — which means shortening as occurs with a muscle cramp.

Most people can see the shortening of the calf muscle when it cramps or is in spasm. A similar thing happens to a person with a spasm of the esophagus, the stomach or the colon.

The entire digestive tube from mouth to rectum has an inner wall of smooth muscle. Food doesn't just drop from your mouth to the rectum by the force of gravity. It is moved along by the milking action of the contraction and relaxation of these muscles.

The small intestine in adult life is about 15 feet long and the large intestine about 5 feet long. The food residue is moved along this 20 foot stretch by the contraction and relaxation of muscles in a rhythmic manner.

If these muscles overcontract or cramp it is a spasm, and as you should know it can hurt. The spasm can be so severe it shuts off the intestine entirely, trapping gas above the spasm which leads to distention and more pain.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A friend recently told me they read about an operation to reduce the size of the breasts. Is this true? Where might I find information regarding this?

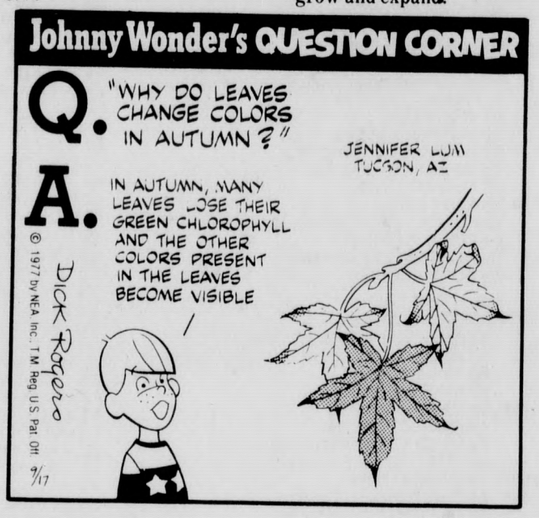

I have such a difficult time finding clothes to fit. Also my posture is affected because I try to minimize my bust by not standing erect. I am not a heavy person in any other way.

DEAR READER — Yes, it is done. Except in unusual circumstances I don't think it is a very good idea. And I don't think it is wise to develop poor posture to try to hide your breasts either. That can lead to other problems. Unless they are so heavy that shoulder straps cause you problems I would think you might just try to think positively about yourself. Think of it as a sign of a good figure. In brief, if you've got it, flaunt it. You might be better off than having surgery.

If you can't accept that, first talk it over with your family doctor. If you convince him you would be better off, then he might want to refer you to a plastic surgeon in your area who does good work.

Most surgeons do good work but not all cases are successful and you might not be so pleased with the results afterward. If you have a misconception about yourself or have some emotional hangups, breast surgery may not be your answer either but may simply complicate matters.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER

In autumn the leaves of many trees turn from green to shades of scarlet, gold and purple. Jack Frost is usually given credit for autum color, but frost has very little to do with it for the colors were hiding in the leaves all along!

The green in leaves all summer comes from a coloring matter called chlorophyll. Using green chlorophyll, the leaves capture the energy of sunlight in order to make food so that the tree can live and grow bigger.

Other colors – yellow, red, orange and purple – are present in the leaves, too. You can't see them because they are hidden by the stronger green.

In autumn, when there is less sunlight, the food-making process stops and the green chlorophyll begins to disappear. The tree has already stored its food for the winter. As the leaves lose their green, the autumn colors are revealed.

Opening lead — 6♠

By Oswald & James Jacoby

There was nothing wrong with South's three-notrump contract except it turned out that South didn't come close to making it.

After the spade lead he could be sure of nine tricks if he could bring in four clubs without letting East into the lead. Hence, he should have played a low club from dummy at trick two and finessed in his hand. Back to the board with the ace of clubs and a second finesse to bring in all five clubs.

Instead, he led the ace to guard against a possible singleton queen in the West hand. Not that a club trick won by West would hurt South. West could not lead a spade successfully.

Anyway, South played the club ace, finessed the second club, played the king of clubs and jack of clubs. East took his queen, led a spade and it was bingo time.

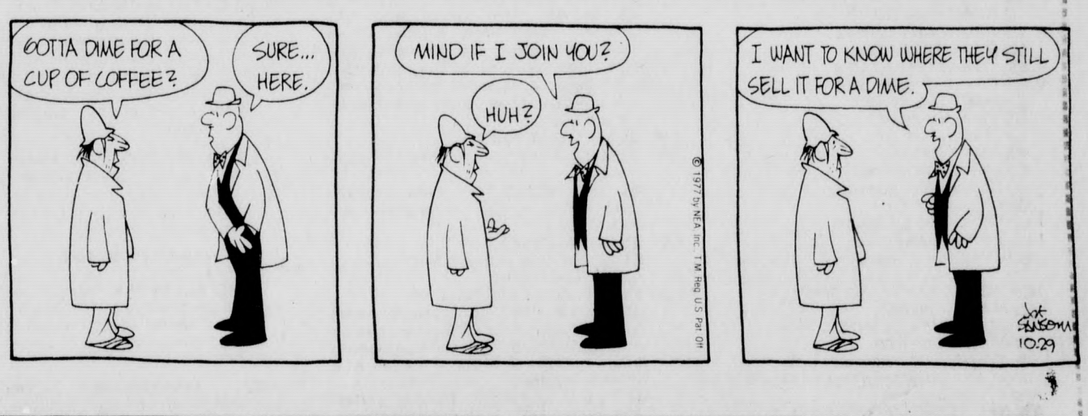

Before a hundred readers write in to tell us that South could still make his contract after misplaying the clubs, we know that he could have done just that.

He should simply cash the red ace-kings and throw West in with the seven of hearts. West could take whatever hearts he still held, but would then have to play a spade and give South a trick with the queen.

On TV...

WALT DISNEY productions will develop three original two-hour World Premiere movies for presentation on NBC this year. The films, represent Disney's entry into the made-for-television field. Last year the company produced "The Ghost of Cypress Swamp" for NBC and it earned high ratings. Among the shows already scheduled for the network this year are "The Ghost Belonged to Me," and "Donovan's Kid."

Charlton Heston speaks

He couldn't part the Red Sea

CHARLTON HESTON

"The essential thing in acting is to be there when the time comes ... of course, there is no telling when that time or place will be," a puckish Charlton Heston commented to his audience.

Heston, who swept to the front ranks of movie actors with his portrayals in "The Ten Commandments" and "Ben Hur," believes advancement in show business is largely a matter of the learning foundation and "the breaks" ... being in the right place at the right time.

Heston's appearance earlier this week at De Anza College's Flint Center in Cupertino drew a near-capacity audience of 2,300.

He was the second of four speakers in a series entitled "The Arts: Perspectives by Four Celebrities."

Coming up are Leonard Nimoy of "Star Trek" fame and Ruth Gordon, the latter on Nov. 23.

"I must tell you," Heston began, "if you've come here to learn about acting, you're too late. For the time when I knew the most was when I was studying it at Northwestern."

Heston would have been in the Class of '46 at Northwestern, along with Cloris Leachman, Patricia Neal and Claude Atkins, who've all gone on to critical acclaim in a host of movie and television roles.

Referring to his profession, Heston said "I can't part the Red Sea for you, actually I tried a stick in our backyard pool and didn't even draw a ripple. I can't take Valencia for you as I did in "El Cid," I can't ride a chariot as in Ben Hur. So I guess, if I can't tell you how to act I can at least tell you how it was."

Heston then launched on an hour's discourse of his career and the grats and near-greats he's encountered.

His first "break" came as a 22-year old actor in New York when he landed a role opposite Katharine Cornell in the stage version of "Julius Caesar."

Cornell preferred tall actors, commented Heston, noting that she was 5-8½ and he is 6-3.

He also had heard that if a leading lady summoned a featured male actor to her dressing room that it could lead to an affair, depending on whether she greeted him in the outer room or her personal dressing room ... and whether the lady wore a dressing gown or stage attire.

Beckoned by Miss Cornell, Heston recalls how he went to her quarters with great trepidation, wondering if he would be asked to the inner dressing room and if the fabled actress would be wearing a gown.

When he got to her quarters, Heston relates, Miss Cornell's maid called for Heston to proceed into Miss Cornell's dressing room. Upon entering, she proceeded to pull aside her gown to reveal a hand-sized black and blue area on her leg.

"Chuck, you know that scene that calls for you to throw me back on the bed!." "Yes," the young Heston responded, his mind racing back to what he "had heard." "Well, Chuck, I'd certainly appreciate it if you could put the sword you carry on the other side. As you can see, it's bruising my leg rather badly."

A relieved Heston allowed as how we would make that change, thanked his somewhat older and reverred leading lady, and retreated from the room.

Heston believes the advent of live television was the most significant thing "given to young actors since talking pictures."

The medium gave the 52-year old Heston the opportunity to do "Julius Caesar" (again), "Taming of the Shrew," and "Macbeth," among others.

From the Broadway stage, Heston went to Hollywood as an independent actor, arriving at the end of the big studio era.

One of the first pictures he did was a western for George Marshall, whose directing credits spanned silents and "talkies." He feels this experience and the opportunity to work with the late directing "giant" C.B. DeMille were invaluable.

He believes the second picture he did for DeMille, "The Ten Commandments," was his biggest movie break.

Asked his favorite leading lady, both at the press conference and the discussion at Flint Center, Heston valorously declined to name any one person ... though he opined that Jennifer Jones was one of the most beautiful ladies he's ever had the opportunity to work opposite ... "one who didn't require makeup." Heston and Miss Jones were teamed in "Ruby Gentry."

Heston said Sir Laurence Olivier, in his opinion, "is certainly the greatest actor alive."

He dwelt on the making of "The Ten Commandments" as well as "Ben Hur," noting the later by wisecracking, "It took me nearly two months to drive a chariot. You know how enormously valuable that is. Well, I haven't had a call (to drive a chariot) since."

Heston also remarked about his portrayal of General Gordon in "Khartoum," the "genius" of Orson Welles and his meeting with him In "Touch of Evil."

Cardinals outpass Cougars

STANFORD — What was billed as a passing dual between the Stanford Cardinals and the Washington State Cougars was exactly that, as the Cards narrowly defeated the Cougars, 31-29 here yesterday.

The win keeps Stanford in a two-way tie for second place in the Pacific-Eight Conference.

But little of the impressive aerial circus materialized in the first half.

The score was deadlocked 14-14 at the half, and many fans had to fight off a tendency to doze, as the teams played see-saw defense and offense with the ball mostly on the ground.

Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin was intercepted early in the first quarter by an alert Cougar

Times SPORTS
Dave Weber, Editor

left end, Scott Pelluer on the Washington 32, but a defensive holding penalty gave the Cards a second chance.

Benjamin, under pressure from the Cougar defense, almost had another one picked off by Don Hover on the Washington 21, and freshman Ken Naber made his first appearance in the game for Stanford to attempt a 38-yard field goal. The kick was blocked by noseguard George Yarno, and the Cougars took over the ball.

Stanford's defense dug in and forced Washington to surrender the ball.

On the next series, Benjamin moved the Cards downfield, hitting wide receiver James Lofton on the Cougar three. Running back John Finley carried it in, and Naber's kick made it 7-0 Stanford,

The Cards, under pressure, stressed ball control throughout most of the first quarter.

It was Darrin Nelson's blazing speed again. On a punt return with two minutes left in the half, the petite freshman ran for 72 yards into the end zone. But alas and alack for the Cards, the play was called back to the Cougar 44 due to a clipping penalty against Stanford. Nelson was credited with 44 yards on the return.

"The barometer of our team is Darrin Nelson. I don't know of Stanford ever having a bettter competitor. This man is a great, distinctive performer. He's the spark of our football team," head football coach Bill Walsh proclaimed.

Washington came back in the opening minute of the second quarter with a 44-yard play also, when Cougar quarterback Jack Thompson found Mike Levensellan on the Stanford three. Running back Mike Washington lept three yards for the touchdown to tie the score.

With Stanford again in possession, Benjamin hit Lofton up the middle for a gain of 25 yards to put the Cards on the Washington 14. The touchdown pass, again to Lofton, pulled the Cards ahead, 14-7.

With time running out on the clock, the Cougars on the Stanford two sneaked it in to tie the game again at 14-14.

That's the point when people began to nod their heads in boredom until the third quarter. That's the same time that both team's defenses fell apart, and the score started soaring.

With fifty seconds showing on the clock, Benjamin completed his second touchdown pass of the day with a 23-yard completion to Bill Kellar who was wondering around all by his lonesome in the end zone. And with Naber's kick, the Cards claimed a 24-14 lead.

The fourth quarter saw Thompson lob a seven-yard touchdown pass to make it 24-20, still in favor of Stanford.

Following the kickoff, Finley and Nelson ran, and Kellar and Lofton cuaght passes, and brought themselves to the Washington 12.

Lofton, who by this time was quite at home in the end zone, latched onto another touchdown pass from Benjamin, and the Cards advanced to a 31-21 edge. Lofton's reception, his ninth of the season, ties the Stanford record for mosttouchdownreceptions in a season.

When the Cougars regained possession, Harold Gilllum took a 38-yard pass from Thompson to put the ball on the Stanford eight. He carried the ball the needed three yards two plays later to put the Cougars back into contention, 31-27. The two-point conversion attempt from Thompson to Dan Doornink was good to put the final score on the board.

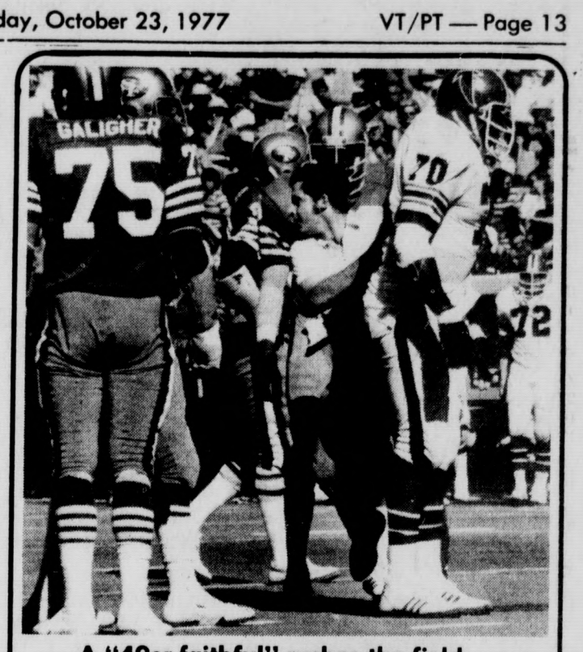

But as was predictable Walsh was not pleased with his defensive showing. "It's hard to measure the progress of our defense, because each week we face a different style of team. But I'm sure glad we don't have to play Thompson again this year. We gave a great effort, but we had some breakdowns. We just didn't do well defensively. We're playing so many young fellows and some not-so-gifted players at some positions. It makes for a wearing afternoon," Walsh lamented.

But one player besides Nelson stood out in his mind. The man that caught two touchdown passes.

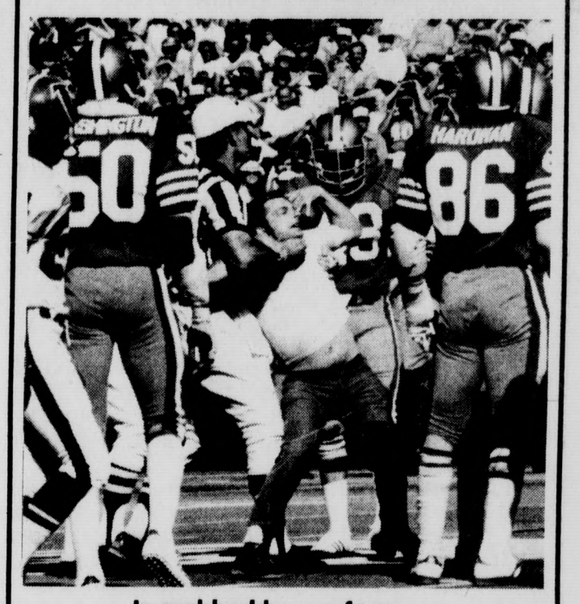

"Lofton is just a great football player. I don't think there are players coming out of college at his position as good as he is this year or in previous years. He's the greatest receiver I've ever been associated with and I worked with five Pro Bowl receivers in the NFL."

Walsh was reluctant to talk about the Cards' record of 5-1. "We've got Oregon State next week on Astroturf," he explained.

A "49er faithful" rushes the field. . .

Is grabbed by a referee. . .

And is unceremoniously escorted off.

The 49ers' frustrations this season got to be simply too much for one fan, who charged onto the field in a recent game, apparently to take the team's sorry state of affairs into his own hands. San Francisco hopes to turn its troubles around today when it takes on Detroit at Candlestick Park this afternoon.

Texas only unbeaten left; Michigan, Colorado fall

Lofty Michigan and powerful Colorado became the newest upset victims Saturday in this topsy-turvy college football season, leaving the Texas Longhorns as the last of the Top Twenty's unbeaten teams.

Top-ranked Michigan was stunned 16-0 by the Minnesota Gophers in their traditional "Little Brown Jug" rivalry, giving Texas a clear shot at No. 1 in this week's poll.

The second-ranked Longhorns made a considerable amount of points by whipping Southwest Conference colleague SMU 30-14 as their fans danced on the bleachers of the rain-soaked Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

Meanwhile, seventh-ranked Colorado lost for the first time this season when they fell 33-15 to No. 18 Nebraska in a battle of Big Eight powers.

Another upset of national significance marked the day when 11th-rated Notre Dame humbled fifth-ranked Southern Cal 49-19 before an emotional, jampacked crowd at South Bend.

Place kicker Paul Rogind booted three field goals and a swarming Minnesota defense stymied Michigan as the Gophers shut out the Wolverines.

Quarterback Mark Carlson started his first game for Minnesota, completing six of 10 passes for 60 yards. Rogind kicked field goals of 41 and 37 yards in the first half, and Marion Barber scored on a 3-yard run to give Minnesota a 13-0 halftime lead.

Rogind added a 31-yard field goal with just over four minutes remaining in the game to complete the scoring.

Michigan fumbled four times, losing possession three times, while the unranked Gophers played mistake-free football and harassed Wolverine quarterback Rick Leach all afternoon, intercepting two passes in the final quarter.

Texas tailback Earl Campbell rambled for a career-high 213 yards in the rain, splattering tacklers and using six tearaway jerseys as the Longhorns crushed spirited Southern Methodist.

I.M. Hipp scored key touchdowns in the second and fourth quarters to lead Nebraska's conquest of Colorado. Hipp's second TD, from 4 yards out, and a 1-yard scoring plunge by Dodie Donnell spelled defeat for the Buffaloes before Nebraska's enthusiastic homecoming crowd.

Holder Ted Burgmeier turned a bad center snap into a 2-point conversion pass and scampered 20 yards on a fake field goal as Notre Dame scored two quick touchdowns late in the second period and crushed Southern Cal.

MORAGA, Calif. — Kevin Shea kicked four field goals to lead St. Mary's to a 19-8 football victory Saturday over U.S. International.

Shea kicked field goals of 37, 43, 38 and 30 yards. St. Mary's held the Westerners to 129 yards offense.

The Gaels' touchdown came on a 73-yard pass from Terry Cottle to Bob Keiper with 8:21 left in the first half.

The Westerners collected a safety when defensive tackle Wayne Thompson downed Cottle in the end zone. The Westerners' touchdown came on a one-yard sneak by quarterback Jim Harris.

The Gaels are now 3-3 and the Westerners are 1-6.

Pate holds on

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Jerry Pate, the sensational tour sophomore who has captured three tournaments including the 1976 U.S. Open, fired a one-under par 69 Saturday to hold off Johnny Miller's challenge and taken a three-stroke lead after the third round of the $125,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament.

Pate, 24, has a 54-hole total of 200, 10-under-par over the hilly, 6,791-yard, par 70 Green Island Country Club course.

Miller, who has won 17 tournaments but is winless since the 1976 Bob Hope Desert Classic 20 months ago, shot a 68 for a 203 total.

Miller, suffering through the worst year of his career, got within two shots of the lead with a birdie on the 17th hole.

Spinks, LeDoux draw in heavyweight bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Minnesota farm boy Scott LeDoux proved to be the first roadblock in Olympic champion Leon Spinks' path toward a title shot Saturday when the two heavyweights slugged their way to a 10-round draw in a nationally televised bout.

But little brother Mike Spinks, also a gold medal-winner at Montreal, and "Big John" Tate, who won a bronze medal in the Olympics, kept their records spotless. Mike Spinks scored an eight-round unanimous decision over Gary Summerhays, and Tate knocked out Lou Esa in the third round of their scheduled six-rounder.

The big fight of the day, however, was the Leon Spinks-LeDoux matchup, because LeDoux is the first "strongman" to face Spinks in his young pro career.

Spinks, now 5-0-1, was at marked disadvantage in experience and weight. LeDoux, 21-6-2, weighed in at 224 pounds.

Lenehan in lead

Betty Lenehan took the early lead in qualifying for the $7,000 Dublin Excel Moped Open bowling tournament with a twelve-game score of 2364 last night at the Dublin 40 Bowl.

Lenehan's average of 197 pins per game was tops in the 'A' squad but half the field of 136 bowlers rolled in the 'B' squad later last night.

San Francisco's Vesma Grinfelds, winner of seven events already in 1977 was just four pins back in second place.

Virginia Norton, one of the few women ever to bowl a sanctioned 800 series, was in fifth place with a still-vulnerable 2252.

Rookie-of-the-Year Donna Adanek was clinging to her slimming hopes of qualifying, in tenth place with a 2198 while San Leandro's Carole Seltz was more secure at 2264.

The ten players who survived last night's cut will meet in round-robin play at 10 a.m. this morning with the top half of that group advancing to the stair-step finals at 3 p.m.

Fans give Ray his driver's licence

OAKLAND — Crowd reactions are an interesting study in mass emotion.

If the shot drops, the gasp turns to a roar.

When Rick Barry pops his jumper, a thousand flabby ex-cagers clench their fists, ready to swing them toward the roof with a triumphant, "yeah!"

When Sonny Parker swings into one of his twisting, sailing, drives, the mob whoops like a band of Hollywood Indians on the way to savage a wagon train.

Clifford Ray would make Rodney Dangerfield proud. Cliff don't get no respect.

Every time he dusts the cobwebs from his flashier moves and drives to the hoop or pops a jumper from farther than two feet, the spectators titter, half-embarrassed.

They act like they're watching Fido bite the mailman they didn't much care for.

Yo dribbling and juking his way to the hoop is forbidden fruit. The fans enjoy it, but they act like it shouldn't be done. It makes them feel guilty.

Like winning a baseball game on a bases-loaded walk to the pitcher. Or a football game on a lateral to the left tackle. Or a hockey game via an empty-net goal by a short-handed team.

Friday night, Cliff pulled more than one shocker on the unsuspecting San Antonio Spurs, whom the Warriors beat 122-117 despite an series of personal foul trouble.

He fired in a first quarter jumper and turned a cross-under lay-up into a three-point play. Ray's piece de resistance came with 8:29 left in the third quarter. Grabbing the ball off the defensive board and finding no one willing to get out on the front of a fast break, Ray dribbled up the left side of the floor — all the way to the hoop.

San Antone's Mark Olberding was with Cliff every step of the way. But, he didn't believe. He kept his distance, expecting Ray to fling a centering pass across the key momentarily.

Ray didn't, choosing instead to jam a left-hand dunk over the bewildered Spur.

"I'm a professional basketball player and I do what they tell me to do," said Ray between sips of a post-game brew. "Whatever it takes to help the team in a particular situation, I do."

He added, "I don't ever go into a game saying I have to do this, or I have to do that. It won't work that way."

Still, with the lead see-sawing in the early portions of the second half, said Ray, "We needed something to get us going."

What never fails to get both the Warriors and the Coliseum crowd going is a hot shooting night by Charles Johnson, the master of the looping jumper from either corner.

Friday, he canned nine of 15 for 18 points.

"That's one of the prettiest things in the game," Johnson allowed of the type of spectacular shooting he does. "If you get your fundamentals together and the trajectory is right, the ball's gonna go in."

CJ also had three steals in the win and added, "Shooting's what the people come to see — nobody comes to watch defense, but defense is the key to winning games."

Which the Warriors did Friday despite yielding 53 free throws to the Spurs and having both centers, Ray and Robert Parish, foul out as well as forward E.C. Coleman, who became the third center upon the disqualification of the two regulars. Wesley Cox, the 6-6 rookie, was number four.

"Maybe some people (and he didn't name referees Milt Cooper and Joe Gushue) heard about the defense we play and didn't think we could do it without fouling," offered Warrior coach Al Attles.

Whatever the reasons, there was not a substantial difference in whistles blown on each team.

The Warriors were called for 38 fouls and had three players foul out, while San Antonio committed 31 fouls and watched two men, Olberding and George Gervin, foul out.

Rick Barry again led the Warriors in scoring with 34 points while Billy Paultz, whose mother-in-law resides in Alamo, meshed 27 to top San Antonio.

When a man beats a woman

On Sports

Shirley Muldowney gets too much credit for second place finishes in the Lower Altoona Motor Speedway Grudgenationals. Dennis Baca is a cheap shot artist.

So much for what the two think of each other. They don't think about gender.

Shirley Muldowney doesn't care that Dennis Baca's a man. If she seethed for revenge against every man who's beaten her, there wouldn't be enough drag strips in the Western Hemisphere to stage all the grudge matches.

Dennis Baca doesn't care that Shirley Muldowney's a woman. He claims to have nothing against the petitet 38-year old, who rebels against her nickname, Cha-Cha, a relic from her days as a teenage hot-rodder on the streets of Schenectady, New York.

"There's no animosity on my part," the Concord carpet dealer said. "Though, I'm sure there's a lot on her part."

The reasons, which snowballed into a two-out-of-three "Battle of the Sexes" match race at Sears Point Raceway Oct. 30, go back to the recent Winston World Finals, or Supernationals, at Ontario Motor Speedway.

Baca, not a regular driver on the National Hot Rod Association's point standings tour, had won the prestigious Indynationals and would come out on top in the Southern California event, which has been compared to the Super Bowl or World Series.

Thus, a lot of folks, including Baca, acclaimed Dennis as the top dragster of the 1977 season. Not Shirley Muldowney.

Using two cars and a bundle of air travel schedules, Muldowney had raced constantly and had piled up an insurmountable lead in the point standings even before the first green light at Ontario.

That makes me the champ, protested Muldowney, whose anger was fueled further by a bit of Baca gamesmanship that drove her to distraction when the two met in the semi-finals.

"I don't want to mislead," says Baca. "She is good, but you can finish third in every one of the point events and come out better than some one who wins only a few big races."

Like Dennis Baca, for instance.

He won't say anything derogatory about his distaff rival — though he did suggest that reporters quote him as saying Muldowney was in her "late 40's, to make her even madder" — but he will, and does, make light of the situation.

"Sure, she's the best woman top fuel driver — she's the only woman top fuel driver," he chided, "That's like me saying I'm the best looking guy on my block and I'm the only guy on my particular block."

Last year at Ontario, Muldowney had eliminated Baca when he blew an engine ("That's no excuse, there are no excuses you either win, or you lose") and lost to him this season at Sacramento.

The rubber match developed when both made the semi-finals at Ontario. Baca, the faster qualifier, had choice of lanes, a bit of protocol that, as it turned out, intensified the rivalry.

Usually, a racer will choose a lane while reserving the right to change if a car using it in the prior race blows an engine, scattering oil across the track and bringing on the mop-up wagon. Baca picked the left lane before his race with Muldowney.

No sooner had he done so than a car in the other semi-final blew its engine in the left lane. We'll take the right lane, said Baca. But, that wasn't the final word. A dragster has till staging time to make a final choice.

And, as Baca headed for the burn-out box, he saw a pit man waving frantically for him to steer into the right lane, still some 500 feet away and apparently satisfactorily cleaned up. Muldowney lived up to her firy nickname. She blew up.

When the light turned green, Baca was off to a 5.84 elapsed time for the quarter mile, the lowest ET of the meet while Muldowney, in a rage-fed moment of hesitation, was left behind.

"She was concentrating so hard on what she thought I had done, when it was time to go, she wasn't ready," Baca said. "It was a normal thing. The basis is, she lost."

He added, "She lost her composure over something that goes on all the time. Psychologically, she gets very involved personally. I guess it's the mark of a competitor."

Baca, too, is a competitor. His self-exhortations are worthy of Vince Lombardi, or at least a grade-B football movie.

"I'm in racing because of the challenge, the competition and the will to win," he says. "I do not look at any competitor when I come to the starting line. I'm prepared for battle.

"I don't care who's next door," he added with a disdainful flip of the wrist at an imaginary Don Garlits, or, yes, Shirley Muldowney. "I don't even look at them."

As for Muldowney and their pre-Halloween date?

"I intend to beat her two straight."

A long-awaited win for Dublin

One Dublin High rooter, tired of seeing his team lose to Livermore every year, wanted to make something perfectly clear: "Spoilers bleep we're champions!"

And a squadron of white jerseys lifted their fingers in unison to the north side of the field, telling no one in particular but wanting the whole world to hear, "Just look at that scoreboard. I love this!"

It was streak-ending time in Livermore Friday night as Dublin High School whipped the Cowboys 25-0 for the first time since 1970 in East Bay Athletic League play.

And, adding a delicious touch, it was homecoming for the 'Pokes.

The Gaels were doing a lot more than just breaking a six-game losing streak against the 'Pokes — not to mention a five-game Livermore win streak this year.

They vaulted themselves into a three-way tie for second place in EBAL play with a 4-1 record. The other team in the bunch, San Ramon, is next week's Gael opponent.

"The going stays rough," said Dublin coach Wayne Re.

The only Dublin loss came against Monte Vista, a team now 4-0 and atop the EBAL in a Cinderella season which could strike Midnight next week when the Mustangs face Livermore in Danville.

It's a safe bet the 'Pokes will have recuperated by then after suffering what simply amounts to their worst loss in recent memory.

It's another safe bet that every Dublin Gael will be rooting for Livermore's undefeatedfoe next week.

The statistics are devastating, the individual performances impressive, and the final score cocksure. It could easily have been 40-0 or 12-0. No matter. The "0" for Livermore was a stunner.

"I think the turning point was the Granada game," Re said after the game when asked about the team's confidence, which picked up considerably after beating the Mats last week. "They knew that if they could play up to their potential, they could beat Livermore. And they did."

Re couldn't think of any particular person to thank for the win, extending his gratuities to them all. "The whole damn team, everyone of them. Thirty-six football players."

However, the individuals who came around at the right time just happened to enjoy their best nights of the year.

Jon Batchelor carried the ball 17 times for 160 yards, breaking away for single runs of 27, 34 and 54 yards. He scored one touchdown on a three-yard run late in the third quarter that put the game in the bag for Dublin, 19-0.

Quarterback Mike Hardy threw 15 passes and completed 12 for 189 yards, two touchdowns and was not intercepted.

Wide receiver Dan Pearson caught eight passes for 136 yards and two TD's, and causing havoc for 'Poke defenders after catching the ball.

Dublin outagined the 'Pokes 434-126 by going right at them. They threw up the middle 15 yards deep to Pearson, let the fleet wide receiver roll off and run for another ten yards and let Batchelor keep them guessing with effective trap runs and sweeps.

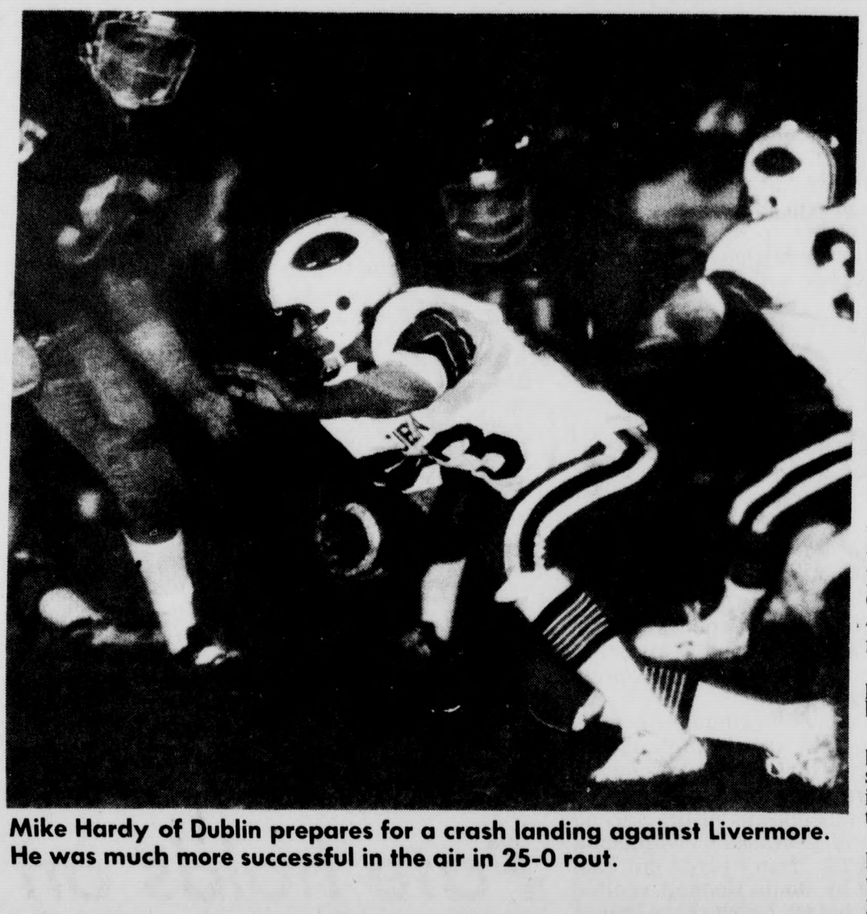

The EBAL's number one defense against the rush was hurt mainly by Hardy's ability to pick them clean up the sides and middle with medium-range passes. Livermore's linebackers definitely had their hands full.

Dublin linemen Todd Boespflug, Tony Soares, Jim Henry, Leroy Brite, Brett Williams, Marty Sparling and Jerome King did double time and protected Hardy and Batchelor well, not to mention snuffing the 'Pokes through the air and on the ground.

Dublin's first score was quick, coming with three minutes elapsed. Charlie Yamada grabbed a 21 yard pass from Hardy for the score and a 6-0 lead.

It stayed that way until the third quarter, but the 'Pokes seemed headed for a game-tying drive late in the second quarter when they had a first down on the Dublin 13.

See 'Gaels,' page 15

Mike Hardy of Dublin prepares for a crash landing against Livermore. He was much more successful in the air in 25-0 rout.

AV comeback runs into Wolves' Houston

DANVILLE — A fourth-quarter comeback by Amador Valley High School went for naught as San Ramon quarterback Guy Houston hit flanker Joe Pappalardo for a 78-yard touchdown with only 2:45 left to give the Wolves a 21-20 East Bay Athletic League football victory Friday night.

A relieved San Ramon coach Lyle Setencich said, "Thank God I have a quarterback like Guy Houston. He can get things turned around in a hurry."

Houston's heroics were essential to San Ramon, which had an off night after rolling up several impressive victories. A tough Amador defense held the Wolves to only 14 yards rushing and 125 yards total offense, less than half of San Ramon's normal production.

The Wolves appeared headed for a routine, if lackluster, victory when they entered the fourth quarter with a 14-0 lead. But Amador's offense came alive.

The Dons got the ball at San Ramon's 44-yard line when Mike Hoff fell on a fumble by the Wolves' Randy Huddleston. Shortly thereafter, quarterback Pat Ingelsby sprinted around right end for what appeared to be a 42-yard touchdown run, but a clipping penalty nullified the play.

Undaunted, Ingelsby came back to throw a 30-yard strike to wide receiver Chuck Gilliam to advance the ball to the SR nine.

Ingelsby tried to carry it over for the score, but was racked up by a crushing hit by San Ramon's Dan Chevez and wasforced to leave the game.

Hoff then blasted over from the one to give the Dons their first score with 11:11 left in the game.

The conversion kick sailed wide to the left, though, and that, combined with a two-point pass attempt that failed later in the period, proved to be the difference in the final score.

After San Ramon's offense sputtered, Amador took over on its own 36, but was stopped when Ingelsby, back in the game, threw incomplete on fourth and 13 at the 50.

But with 6:49 left, Gilliam intercepted a Houston pass at the Amador 21. Tim Monday replaced Ingelsby for good at quarterback and handed off to Rob Flores, who picked up 151 yards on 22 carries. Flores burst through the San Ramon line for 11 yards.

Then Monday threw a short pass to his tight end, Paul McCleary, who turned a simple play into a spectacular 68-yard touchdown. Chevez broke up Monday's conversion pass attempt, though, and Amador still found itself behind, 14-12.

San Ramon regained the ball with only six minutes to go, but the Dons' defense forced the usually-sharp Houston to throw two incompletions and rush for a three-yard loss.

After a short punt, Amador took over at its own 46. Monday picked up a first down on a fourth-and-one situation. Then, the junior quarterback pitched out to Flores, who picked his way down the right side for a 43-yard touchdown.

RBAL influence ruins Gladiators

OAKLAND — Laney College may be located in this city, but it was the Richmond-Berkeley Athletic League that all but eliminated Chabot College from Golden Gate Conference title contention here Friday night.

The score was 43-20 and the point totals were indicative of the type of game it was.

Led by former Pinole Valley High School quarterback Mark Dent and ex-Berkeley running back Ray Crouse,the Eagles rolled up 425 yards total offense in flattening the Gladiators.

Chabot is now 2-2 in GGC play and Laney is flying high with a 4-1 record.

Crouse was the most painful thorn in Chabot's side, rushing for 209 yards in 24 carries and scoring three touchdowns.

Dent, who led Pinole Valley to the North Coast Section 4-A crown two straight years, completed eight of 13 passes for 120 yards and three touchdowns.

The Gladiators were still in the contest at halftime, trailing 14-7, but big gainers killed the Hayward squad in the third period.

With 13:01 left in the third quarter Dent hit Vern May with a 54-yard bomb at the right sideline for a score.

Four minutes later Crouse blasted through a hole, eluded two Chabot tacklers and coasted to a 75-yard touchdown run giving the Eagles a 27-7 lead.

The Glads came back when Ron Jones hit Keith Fyfe with a 13-yard pass over the middle to conclude a 45-yard drive in six plays. Former Livermore kicker star Charlie Bockover hit his second extra point to pull the Gladiators back within striking distance.

However, Crouse came right back with a 27-yard burst off tackle to give Laney a secure 34-14 advantage at the third quarter break.

The Gladiators closed to 34-20 three seconds into the final period on Jones' 13-yard touchdown pass to Dave Fernandez, the wide receiver's second score of the night. But Bockover's extra point failed.

The Eagles wrapped up the contest when Dent hit Charles Edwards for a six-yard touchdown pass and Paul Montgomery hit a 23-yard field goal.

Laney gained 305 yards on the ground and showed its dominence by holding the ball for 84offensive plays as compared to 54 for Chabot.

Crouse opened the scoring in the first quarter when he spurted over from four yards out to conclude a 60-yard drive in 12 plays. He carried the ball on seven plays in the drive and caught an eight-yard pass from Dent to start the series.

The Eagles struck again in the closing minutes after ex-Amador Valley High star John Sevo's punt was blocked.

Laney recovered on the 25 and took the ball into the end zone in six plays with Dent hitting John Wilson on a two-yard pass on the right corner of the end zone.

Chabot came back to close the margin to 14-7 on Fernandez's 25-yard pass from Jones. The score culiminated a 55-yard drive in four plays. A 15-yard personal foul penalty against Laney aided the drive.

Jones also hit Jeff Evans with a nine-yard pass to open the drive.

Jones completed nine of 17 passes for 140 yards, but was intercepted three times. Fyfe led the losers' running attack with 37 yards in four carries.

Sevo would have had a brillant day except for the blocked punt. He punted six times for a 32.8 average, figuring the blocked punt as a zero-yarder.

Chabot coach Keith Calkins bemoaned his team's mistakes.

"We just didn't play smart football," he said. "They have a good team and some good running backs, but we haven't been playing well."

The Gladiators will host Foothill at 7:30 p.m. Friday night.

Robison a handyman in Mat win

Steve Robison was a jack-of-all-trades for Granada High School's football team yesterday as the Matadors gained their first East Bay Athletic League victory of the year with an easy 40-8 win over host California.

The victory gives Granada a 1-3 mark in EBAL action and a 3-4 record overall. California is now 0-4 in league play and 2-5 overall. The loss for especially frustating for the Grizzlies since it was their Homecoming Game.

Robison, who has been sharing the quarterback duties with Jay McGowan in recent weeks, completed six of 13 passes for 69 yards and two touchdowns. He also scored en a 16-yard run and picked off two Grizzly passes.

In all, Granada's defenders intercepted five California passes, three of them in the first half when the Matadors rolled up a 26-0 lead.

Another key factor in the Granada win was the return to full strength of Steve D'Ambra, who rushed for 94 yards in seven carries and used his breakaway running to score one touchdown and set up another one.

After Robison hit Mike Adams with a 25-yard pass for the first score early in the first quarter Steve picked off a Ken Major pass on the next series.

He returned the ball to the California 48 and from there the Mats scored in five plays. D'Ambra's 26-yard dash to the six set up McGowan's six yard run for the score.

The next time Granada got its hands on the ball D'Ambra broke loose from two California tacklers near the line of scrimmage and ran 41 yards to give the Matadors an 18-0 advantage. Robison then hit Adams for the two-point conversion and Granada had a 20-0 lead with 9:02 left in the half.

The Mats scored their next touchdown right before the half ended.

After Major's fourth-down pass fell incomplete Granada marched 55 yards in five plays, aided by a 15-yard penalty against California. From the Grizzly 45 Robison sprinted 13 yards to the 27 and then hit Steve Waldera on three passes in four plays, the last reception accounting for the score from eight yards out.

Chuck Cary came on to quarterback the Grizzlies in the third period but was forced to pass on nearly every play and was sacked three times by the aggressive Matador defense.

The Matadors added their fifth touchdown with just 2:41 left in the third quarter.

After a California fumble Robison threw an incomplete pass. But on the next play he went back quickly saw there were no open receivers and ran up the middle 16 yards for the TD.

California scored its only touchdown with 5:05 left in the final period when Matt Dulick, who took over the quarterback duties after Cary, drove two yards for the score.

The score was set up when a Granada punt was partially blocked and the Grizzlies got the ball on the Matador 25.

Chabot booted by Rams, lose 3-1

HAYWARD — Chabot College's soccer team scored with only two minutes into the game, but it was all downhill from there as the Gladiators lost to City College of San Francisco for the second time this season.

The Glads' 3-1 loss left their Golden Gate Conference record at 6-3, while San Francisco upped its mark to 7-2 in conference play.

Striker Fahad Al-Othman scored Chabot's only goal, booting the ball in after taking a centering pass from halfback Bob Arteaga. San Francisco's goalie was able to deflect Al-Othman's initial shot, but the ball dribbled off his hands, giving Al-Othman another try.

San Francisco rallied, however, and scored twice in the last eight minutes of the first period to take a 2-1 halftime lead.

CCSF's Dennis Triantfillov got the visitors on the scoreboard first, scoring on an assist from Pat Spiers. CCSF got its second goal on a penalty kick by Rick Azofeifa.

The visitors scored their final goal in the first minute of the second half when Brian Delahanty broke away and teammate Gerardo Tehran hit him with a pass.

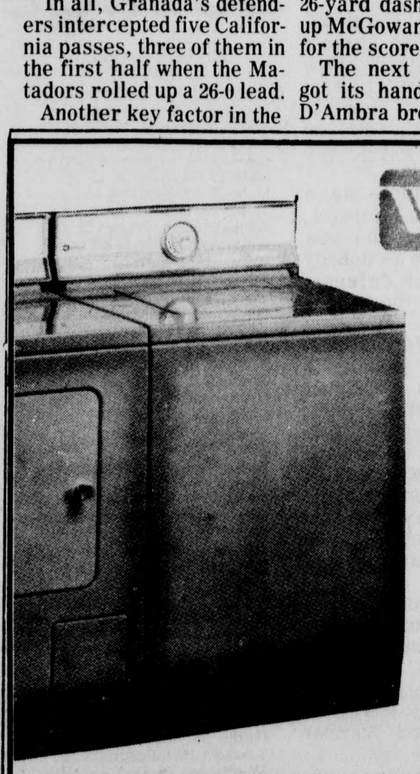

The game was very uncharacteristic of Chabot's defense, as it had allowed only three goals in 12 games. The Glads have also racked up 10 shutouts during that span.

Chabot has been hit hard by injuries. Midfielder Brad Boldrini was unable to play because of a charley horse, so Arteaga, normally a sweeper, played at halfback.

The loss hurts Chabot's chances of winning the Golden Gate Conference.

The Glads ar two full games behind De Anza College, which leads the league with an 8-1 record.

The Dons defeated Foothill Friday, 2-1 to maintain their lead.

Despite all their efforts to make Foothill High School's homecoming a success, the Monte Vista Mustangs couldn't help but come away with a 17-8 East Bay Athletic League football win Friday night in Pleasanton.

The Mustangs picked up 125 yards in penalties, fumbled five times (losing three) and threw an interception, but the Falcons couldn't take advantage of the Monte Vista lapses and gained only 26 yards in the first half.

The win kept Monte Vista's record unblemished in East Bay Athletic League play at 4-0, and gave them sole Possession of first place — the first time in school history they have been alone in first place this late in the season.

Foothill is 0-4 in league play and 0-6-1 overall.

Bart Adams and John Pashby triggered the Monte Vista attack as they gained 136 and 138 yards rushing, respectively. Adams also hit seven of 22 passes for 116 yards as the Mustangs totalled 384 yards.

As has become their custom, Monte Vista took control of the game in the first half and then eased up in the waning minutes.

Foothill quarterback Doug Stevenson failed to complete a pass in the first half and had but two completions at the end of three quarters, but heated up in the final period when Foothill gained most of its 224 yards.

Monte Vista scored on its second possession of the game on a nine play, 56-yard drive that Adams culminated with a one yardrun. The Mustangs played most of the first half deep in Foothill territory, but the only other score they managed was a 26-yard field goal by Craig Robinson with 27 seconds left in the half.

After a long halftime, Chip Abrams pounced on a fumble on Foothill's second play to set up yet another Adams score. Robinson's kick wound up up the Monte Vista scoring with 10:51 left in the third period, but Foothill's inability to mount an offense against the Mustang defense put the game effectively out of reach.

Monte Vista has given up a maximum of one touchdown in its last six games, but the Mustangs will face Livermore next week in Danville in what could be the most important game of the EBAL season.

In what could be the least important game, Foothill travels to Granada in search of win number one.

To find that victory, the Falcons will have to locate a running game, as they gained just 64 yards in 29 carries. Stevenson threw well in the final period but wound up eight for 31 for 160 yards. Greg Costello was the top rusher with 36 yards in 14 carries.

Sam Sisneroz had a fine game at wide receiver for Foothill, snagging three passes for 102 yards and Foothill's only TD in the fourth period. Stevenson hit Sisneroz on a post pattern from 15 yards out with 3:21 left and despite a 53-yard drive in the last minute, the Falcons failed to score again.

Gaels derail Livermore

A penalty and a sack of Piazza put the 'Pokes back on the 34, though, and the drive ended later with a missed field goal by Jeff Perry.

The third quarter kickoff went to Livermore, but the Gaels caught Frank Brown for a 17-yard loss after a fumble and gained all the incentive they needed.

Piazza punted the ball out to the 37 from his end zone, and the Gaels drove the distance rather obliquely to gain the TD.

After getting a first down at the 27, Batchelor ran for an apparent score, but the play was called back on a holding penalty.

On the very next play, Hardy hit Pearson up the middle, Pearson rolling to his left and romping past all Livermore defenders for a 39-yard score. The PAT snap was fumbled again, and Dublin's 12-0 lead still seemed conquerable.

However, Dane Seropian intercepted a Piazza pass on the Livermore 27 during the Cowboys' next series and the Gaels took over.

In nine well-executed plays, the Gaels took their third score on Batchelor's three-yard run around end. The kick by Yamada made it 19-0.

The 'Pokes made a pair of first downs in their next possession, but punted on a fourth-and-three from their own 48, hoping the defense would rise to the occasion.

It didn't matter. Dublin's offense flew at the occasion.

They drove 82 yards, benefitting from Batchelor's 54-yard scamper on first down from from the 18, and culminated the drive with a 21-yard scoring pass from Hardy to Pearson. 25-0 Dublin.

After Batchelor intercepted a Piazza bomb on the next play from scrimmage, the Gaels ate away the final seven minutes in a 16-play drive which fell short at the Livermore two as time ran out.

In the second half, Dublin ran 38 plays to Livermore's 14.

It was revenge for the Irish, heretofore unlucky with the 'Pokes. Previous scores of Livermore-Dublin skirmishes stuck out like running sores: 1971, 7-6; 1972, 27-6; 1973, 14-8; 1974, 14-13; 1975, 21-20; 1976, 47-21.

The contests in '71 and '74 kept the Gaels from enjoying undefeated championship seasons, and the '71 loss knocked them from a title chance. The loss in 1975, the first year as head coach for Re, was a disputed two-point conversion run by Livermore and 76's was the killer of any hopes of a Dublin title last year.

For the 'Pokes, it was their first EBAL shutout since suffering a 3-0 setback to Granada in 1974 in Don Couch's first year as Mat head coach. Ron Berg took over for Livermore in 1975 and Friday' defeat was one of his worst, having compiled an 11-4 EBAL record up to then.

But if any light can be shed upon the 'Pokes, it's that of meeting the Kings of The Hill, Monte Vista, next week, an immediate chance for recovery.

Last year, Livermore lost to Amador 20-7 in the fourth week of the season for their second loss of the campaign and came back to tie for the title three weeks laterby beating co-champion Granada.

Dublin, meanwhile, beat San Ramon last year to knock them from the title race in the last week. The Wolves will remember.

And so will the Mustangs. They lost a lopsided 42-0 decision to the title-bound 'Pokes in Livermore last year.

ND crushes USC

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Holder Ted Burgmeier turned a bad center snap into a twopoint conversion pass and scampered 20 yards on a fake field goal as 11th-ranked Notre Dame scored two quick touchdowns late in the second period and crushed fifth-ranked Southern California 49-19 Saturday.

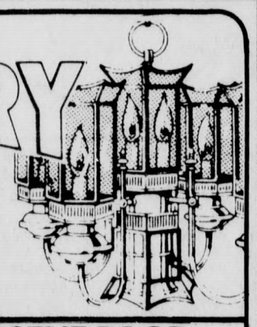

A capacity crowd of 59,075 in Notre Dame Stadium, plus a national television audience, saw the underdog Irish overcome a pair of heart-breaking fumbles and hand Southern Cal its worst defeat since a 51-0 drubbing by Notre Dame in 1966.

Notre Dame scored on Joe Montana's one-yard sneak with 2:37 left in the half to snap a 7- 7 tie.

Glad tips Foothill

LOS ALTOS HILLS — Chabot's women's volleyball team put together one of its better matches of the year to defeat Golden Gate Conference opponent Foothill College, 3-0, Friday night.

The scores were 16-14, 15-12, 15-2.

Amador Valley graduate was Chabot's best server and earned the praise of Glad coach Lois Machado.

"Debbie, in addition to being our top server, played her best offensive game of the year for us," said Machado.

Cindy Aafedt, also from Amador, was Chabot's top performer on defense, as she has been most of the season.

The victory put Chabot's league record at 3-5, and the Glads are now 6-6 overall.

Recreation bonanza to unfold at Crow Canyon

Real Estate

Dick Baker, representative of Crow Canyon County Club, has announced that the thirteen lighted courts which make up the tennis complex at the private country club development by Broadmoor Homes, Inc., are currently open for play.

Each acrylic-surfaced, laser beam perfected court is lit by 8,900 watts of electricity. Locker and shower room facilities will be available to tennis players, and a professional staff officiates for lessons, equipment advice and the pro shop facility.

Located near Danville, the Crow Canyon Country Club development has a "lavish recreational complex," said Baker, not only in tennis facilities but other recreation facilities as well.

An 18-hole, championship-caliber golf course is currently being developed. By November, nine holes will be ready for play, Welch noted.

The course is situated on 120 acres of undulating hills, which upon completion will be spotted with over 3,000 specimen trees and five sparkling lakes.

Designed to challenge a golfer's skill, each hole has a character all its own, Baker continued. From any point of the course, the player has a panoramic view of the picturesque Danville Valley or the peaceful foothills of Mt. Diablo.

An AAU competition swimming pool with racing lanes and one and three meter diving boards with adjacent shower and locker areas are part of the recreation complex.

The 34,000-square-foot clubhouse is nothing less than spectacular, Baker said. Upon entry through its sculptured bronze doors, one sees a crystal chandelier that highlights beveled mirrors set in walnut panels and a skylighted, redwood-panelled gallery that displays living trees and plants.

In the lounge area, a sunken, mirrored bar is lighted by chandeliers. A sunken converstion area has a massive, warm fireplace, and walls of glass provide a view of the Diablo Valley.

Two spacious dining areas with floor to ceiling windows also offer a panoramic view. In addition, the innovative structure boasts a unique, circulare dance floor, a banquet room and the most modern and complete club kitchen facility in the area, Baker continued.

Separate men's and women's grill rooms have cocktail and food facilities and locker rooms with showers and jacuzzi spas.

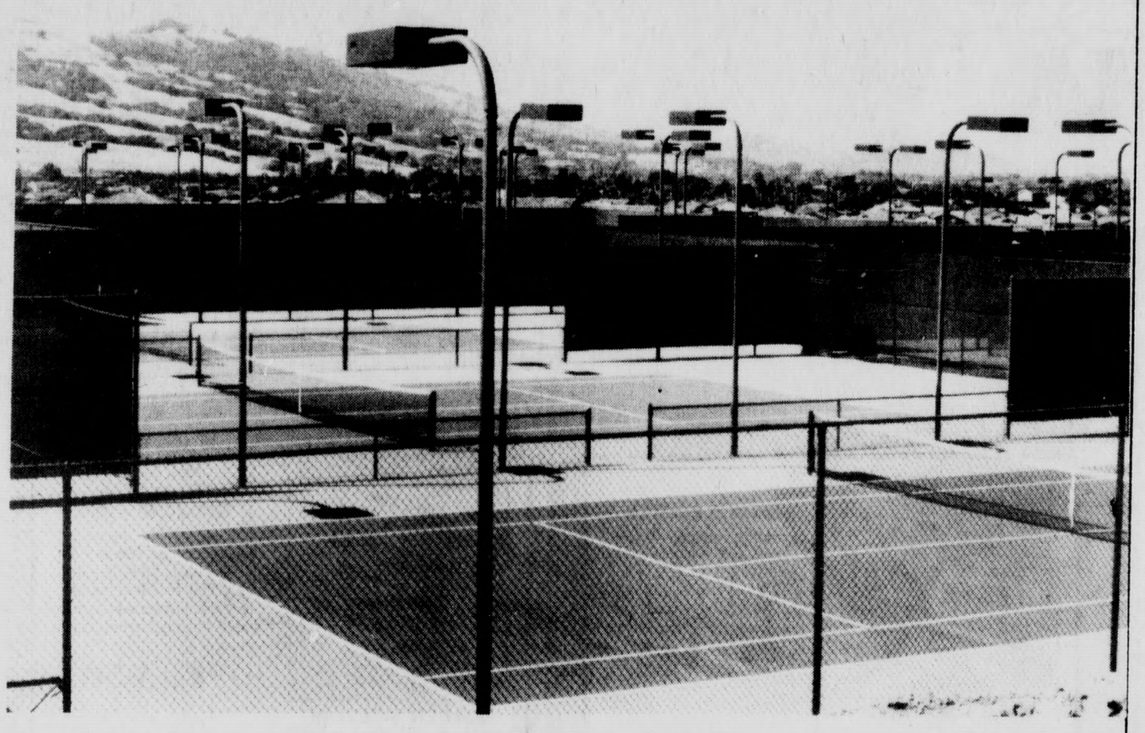

Golf and tennis pro shops are fully equipped, and professional staffs are available for lessons and equipment advice.

Memberships in the Crow Canyon Country Club are available subject to conditions of application. Three types are offered, regular, tennis and pool, and social memberships.

The overall development is one of scenic beauty.

The private golf and tennis clubhouse facilities will occupy some 120 acres of the total planned community, with nearly 100 additional acres of parks and open space.

Aside from diverse recreation facilities, a wide range of home styles are available. The luxurious Crow Canyon Country Estates are three and four bedroom homes which range from 1,858 to 2,808 square feet. These are priced from $109,000 to $181,000.

The tennis courts at Crow Canyon Country Club are open and ready for play. The recreation complex and homes located near Danville are by Broadmoor Homes, Inc.

Bank of America has solar loan plans

San Francisco — Bank of America announced today it is introducing a Solar Energy Financing Program for California homeowners.

Under the new program, which is part of the bank's home improvement loan package, qualified customers will be able to obtain financing for the installation of solar hot water heating, swimming pool heating, home space heating and cooling.

"Rising energy costs from traditional sources have made solar energy more attractive and many systems are of sufficient quality for us to offer financing for them," said J. A. Carrera, exective vice president and head of the bank's California Division.

The bank already makes available financing for other energy-saving improvements such as insulation, double pane windows, and more efficient heating and cooling systems.

Jobs in construction up, building activity down

Los Angeles — Employment in California's construction industry reached an all-time high in July while building activity in the state, as measured by value of permits granted, was down 17 per cent from the record level set in June.

"This disparity is more apparent than real," said Ben Bartolotto, director of the Construction Industry Research Board (CIRB).

"The high employment reflects work being done now on permits issued some months back. There's always a lag of about three to six months after permits are granted and before the peak demand for labor occurs."

Building permits issued in July, both residential and non-residential, totaled $1.24 billion, down from the record $1.49 billion in June, according to researchers at Security Pacific National Bank.

Analysts do not necessarily view July's decline as a significant downturn since June figures were exceptionally high. Also, July is typically a slower month than June with respect to building permits.

According to State estimates, construction employment reached an all-time high of 379,000 in July, up from a revised 377,000 level for June and nearly 5,000 more than the previous monthly high recorded in September 1973.

"Construction employment this year should average a record 365,000 or more," said Bartolotto, "especially considering the most recent announcement by the State that construction employment has reached 387,000. Making August the third consecutive record-breaking month."

If these employment figures continue as expected, 1977 will represent a dramatic improvement over the recession levels experienced during 1975 and early 1976.

"Because construction affects so many industries, such an upturn in this industry contributes significantly to the employment outlook for the state as a whole," added Bartolotto.

"And in fact, many of California's economic indicators have already been reported in the national press as running ahead of the country as a whole."

The jobless rate among California's estimated 415,000 construction workers continued to drop.

Housing speculation in decline

San Francisco — "Single-family housing speculation is on the wane in California's two largest metropolitan areas," according to Anthony M. Frank, chairman and chief executive officer of United Financial Corporation of California, the parent company of Citizens Savings and Loan Association.

New home buyers should watch out

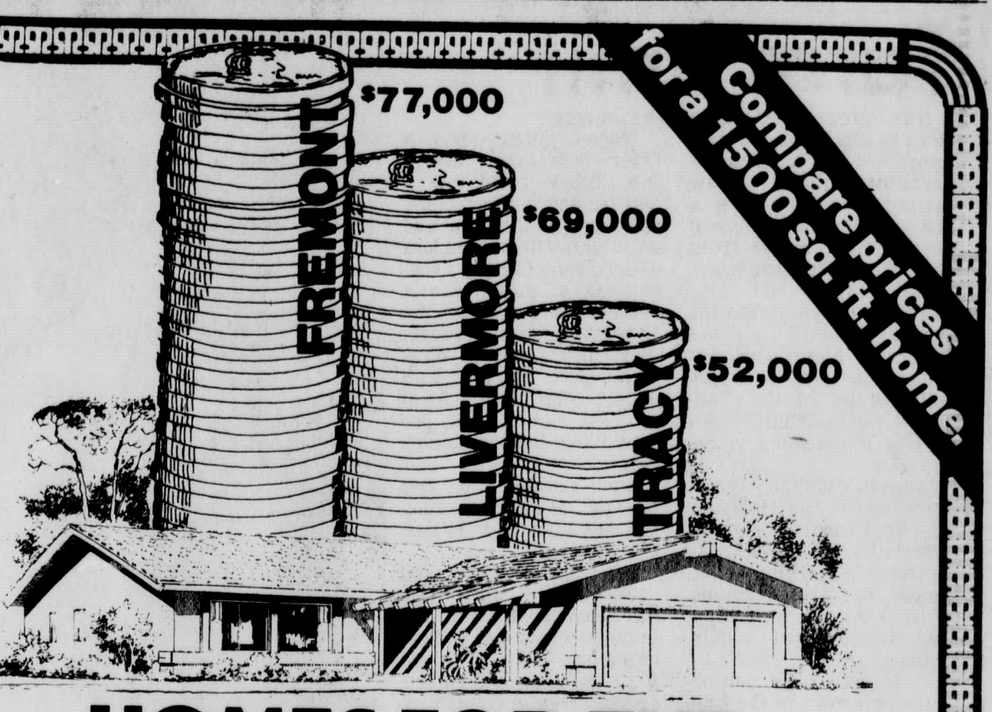

SACRAMENTO (AP) — People who buy homes in booming new suburban tracts may have to pay several hundred dollars each for temporary school buildings under a new state law.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s office said Thursday that Brown had signed SB 201 by Sen. Jerry Smith, D-Saratoga, a bill aimed at the problem of overcrowded schools in growing residential areas.

The bill would let a local government and its school district levy a fee on developers for construction of temporary school buildings. The developers would pass the cost along to home buyers.

As a legislative consultant explained the issue, population from a new development often leads to overcrowding and pressure to build a new school, but normal sources of state and local funding usually can't be tapped until the houses are in place.

By then it's too late to build a school that children in the new development can attend when they move in, said Fred Silva, consultant to the Senate Local Government Committee.

Realtors hit 160-acre farm limit

San Diego — Strong Realtor opposition has been expressed to proposed enforcement of a 1902 law which would place a 160-acre limit on the size of farms using water from federally funded projects.

Directors of the 110,000-member California Association of Realtors meeting here this week voted unanimously to oppose enforcement of the "outdated and restrictive" law by the Department of the Interior.

Jerome Blank of Albany, President of the statewide Realtors group, said his organization would take an active role in trying to persuade the Carter Administration not to implement the controversial regulations.

"We will make our opposition known to the California Congressional delegation and the Department in the hope that logic and reason will prevail and that California farmers will not be subjected to this restrictive federal intervention," Blank said.

He explained that the 1902 law was originally intended to offer family farmers low-cost irrigation water in arid regions, primarily in the western states. The Act limits farm size to 160-acres per person or 320 acres for a husband and wife and requires that owners reside on or near the property.

When Congress passed a later reclamation law in 1926, Blank noted that it omitted any mention of the residency requirement and went on to allocate billions of tax dollars to build a vast network of dams, canals and other waterways in the 17 western states. Today, more than a million acres of land are irrigated with waters from those federal projects with some 85 per cent of that land in California.

Since passage of the 1902 law, the 160-acre limitation has only been enforced on a sporatic basis.

"Both the technology and economics of agriculture have changed dramatically in the past 55 years," Blank explained. "We can't expect California farmers, either large or small, to meet the state's expanded food needs by adding one further restrictive federal enforcement of this outdated horse-and-buggy law.

"We oppose these regulations on special grounds and general principles of government intervention and over-regulation of the open market place and the free enterprise system," Blank added.

The Realtor president said he hoped that the Department of Interior would "take a scond look" at the economic ramifications of enforcing the old act.

Checking ads for speculators

In August, 1977 Citizens Savings' Research Department initiated a study of whether newspaper classified advertisements for homes for rent might be used as an indicator of the presence of speculation or an increased interest in investment buying in the single family housing market. It was hypothesized that when speculation was occurring, there would be a larger volume of homes for rent when compared to other periods of time.

Four areas associated with speculative buying patterns — Orange County, San Fernando Valley (Los Angeles County), Contra Costa County, and Santa Clara County — were selected for study. Utilizing the major newspapers in each area, the number of homes advertised for rent on sample days was noted. For standardization, the raw number of homes advertised for rent in each paper in January 1974 was designated as the base and assigned an index figure of 100; totals for other months were converted accordingly. Aside from the change in volume to be determined from the indexing, a telephone survey rental listings was conducted in July to obtain a reading on the proportion of newly acquired properties, and the tendency to commit to lease agreements.

A dramatic increase in volume of home rental advertisements was noted in each of the four study areas during 1976, an increase too large to be fully accounted for merely by building activity, seasonal trends, changes in the economy, population growth, or vacancy rates. Furthermore, the telephone survey confirmed that half of the respondents had owned the rental property advertised one year or less. By contrast, the incidence of respondents who had owned a particular property two to five years was evenly distributed. A majority of respondents were willing to grant one year leases. That new owners were slightly more apt to sign leases suggests that rapid turn-over of property will not occur. Nevertheless, the overall high volume of home rentals combined with the presence of such a large proportion of recently purchased homes in the rental market indicates that the level of home rental advertisements can be used as a gross measure for detecting speculative buying or increased investment buying in the single family home market.

As might be expected, the data for Orange County was the most striking. Index values for the second half of 1976 were nearly double those of the previous year. This extra ordinarily high level of home rentals continued into 1977. Although the index values began to decline in July 1977, they are still at a level that far exceeds what would be a normal increase, indicating speculative activity is still in force. In the July survey, length of ownership ranged from one week to twelve years with the median length being one year.

Data for the other Southern California study area, the San Fernando Valley, did not reveal such dramatic contrasts.

More building permits out

San Francisco — Total building permit authorization in the 16 Northern Coastal counties reaches $337 million in August, up a strong 26 per cent from July's $267 million figure.

Gerald McIntyre, vice president and administrator of the bank's Real Estate Finance Department in San Francisco, said that the $337 million total included a 10 per cent gain in homebuilding and a 67 percent jump in nonresidential construction. "The large increase in nonresidential permit valuations, which reached a 22-month high, was primarily due to the issuance of one $39 million permit for an office building in San Francisco," he explained. In addition, he noted that this permit accounted for over half of the region's entire commercial construction activity for the month.

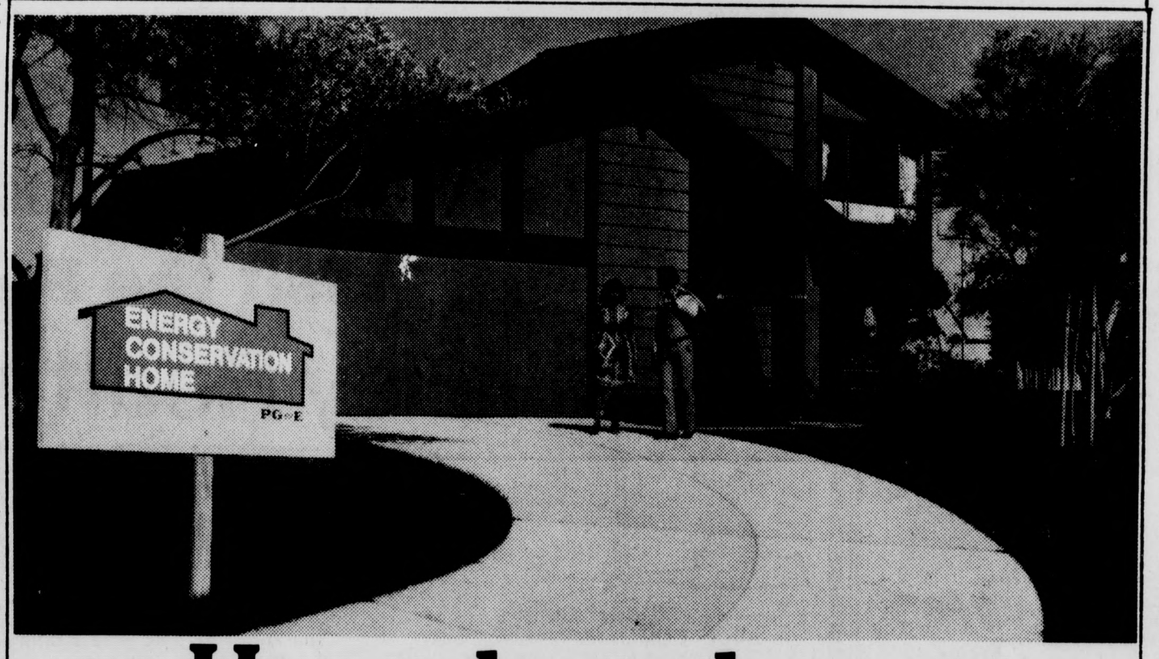

McIntyre based his report on data compiled by Security Pacific Bank's Research Department for the current issue of the bank's monthly publication, California Construction Trends, which this month features the 1978 outlook for office building in California.

Security Pacific Bank's executive said that homebuilding permits issued during August totaled $211 million, up 10 per cent over July's $191 million.

"Single-family home permits totaled $160 million during August," he said, "as compared with $133 million for the month-earlier. Permits for multiple dwelling units — duplexes, triplexes and apartments — totaled $26 million, a drop of 25 per cent from the $35 million recorded during July."

Home remodeling accounted for the balance of Northern Coastal California's residential sector and, at $24 million, represented an 8 per cent increase over the previous month's $23 million total.

On the nonresidential side, McIntyre reported that Northern Coastal California's 16-county region registered $126 million in August, up a significant 67 per cent from the July level of $75 million.

How to keep the cost of running a home down to a walk.

With energy prices continuing to rise, the best way to keep costs down is to buy a home that uses less energy. Like one that displays the Energy Conservation Home sign, which tells you that a lot of energy-saving features are built into the house, whether it's new or remodeled.

These days, new homes have to meet local, State and Federal (FHA) insulation and weatherstripping requirements. But Energy Conservation Homes go a lot further. Each has a combination of special, built-in energy-saving features, such as dishwashers with "off" switches for the drying cycle; water-saving faucets, toilets and showerheads; pilotless ignition gas ranges; energy-efficient water heaters; fluorescent lighting; insulated hot water piping; set-back furnace thermostats; or clogged-filter indicators on heating or cooling systems.

The features included in each home will vary, but here's how the program works. PG&E awards points for each installed conservation feature. And builders must achieve a minimum of 50 points to qualify a dwelling as a PG&E Energy Conservation Home, and to display the sign.

Because so many people are demanding energy conservation, builders are beginning to get the message.

The time for careless consumption of energy is over. It's too expensive, and we can't risk running out of it. And a good time to make sure energy costs don't eat you out of house and home, is when you buy.

PG and E

No one can afford to waste energy.

Speculation down in major markets

ficers and security analysts from major eastern financial institutions, Frank described how his firm was tracking the level of real estate speculation in the Los Angeles/Orange County and San Francisco areas. He said, "Although we felt speculation had played a major role in pushing up the prices of single family residences in California during the past two years and had recently leveled off, we wanted to get a better handle on the situation and see if there were any measurable indicators of speculative activity. We assumed that when real estate speculation increased, 'speculators' would advertise to try to rent their 'investments,' waiting for prices to increase. Results of a study conducted by Citizens' Research Department show that home rental advertising in Los Angeles/ Orange County and San Francisco suburban area newspapers increased dramatically beginning in the spring and summer of 1976, leveling off and declining during this past summer."

Frank said that his company will continue to moniter this apparent new indicator of real estate speculation level and report any significant findings.

United Financial is the holding company for the nation's sixth largest state chartered savings and loan association. Citizens has 75 authorized bRanch offices located throughout California.

Scary drought report

WASHINGTON (AP) — California's two-year-old drought could become permanent and hints at worse things to come, including severe water shortages and cave-ins if underground water is depleted, federal water experts said.

In a long-awaited report, the General Accounting Office predicted that by the year 2,000 California will be short almost three million acre feet of water annually — the amount needed to supply three million five-person families for a year.

The report also said huge overdrafts of underground water, unless reduced, may result in massive cave-ins that would destroy a million acres of the state's most productive farm land in the San Joaquin Valley.

Prices stable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation held to a moderate rate last month as consumer prices rose by only three tenths of 1 per cent, the same as in August, the government reported today.
